Pincers Movement

By W. P. Saphire
International News Service Staff Writer

Cairo, Jan. 29.—Free French troops operating in the heart of the Libyan desert tonight announced the second conquest of their campaign—capture of the Italian military post at Gatrun.

On other fronts in the African war zone, Anzac mechanized troops swerved around the north Libyan post of Derna and struck toward the Italian air base at Appollonia in an effort to cut off the Derna garrison. The Italians were also under pressure east of Metemma in Ethiopia.

Official dispatches from Nairobi, Kenya Colony, said a South African armored car patrol routed an enemy force in the Moyale area, along the southern Ethiopian frontier.

Libyan Pincers Developing

Later the South Africans beat off a counterattack. Between 20 and 30 Italians were killed in the two clashes, it was stated.

Latest word of the exploits of the Free French troops who struck 300 miles northward from the border of French equatorial Africa, indicated that their destruction of the Fascist air center at the oasis of Murzuk-Fessan was no fly-by-night act of bravado, but the calculated stroke of a developing southern wing of a Libyan pincers.

The southern army of Gen. Charles de Gaulle withdrew from Murzuk-Fessan after its capture—but radio advices indicated that the Free French are holding on to Gatrun. In capturing the desert post, the Free French said, they inflicted serious losses in men and material on the Italians.

Towns Expected to Fall

Although the Italians are making a stand at both Derna and Metemma, the British constantly are bringing reinforcements up to the two towns, and their fall, as well as the collapse of Agordat in Eritrea, "may be expected in a few days."

27 Guardsmen Hurt, Trainman Killed in Wreck

Sandersville, Miss., Jan. 29 (AP).—Eight cars and the engine of an Indiana National Guard train, one of 33 specials bearing troops to Camp Shelby, near Hattiesburg, overturned near here today, killing the fireman and injuring 27 soldiers, three of them seriously.

An investigation was begun by Federal, State and military authorities.

Gov. Johnson sent Maj. Thomas J. Grayson here. Three Federal Bureau of Investigation agents also were at the scene.

Engineer Hosey L. Brown said he slowed the train at a wide curve and that the engine left the rails when he reopened the throttle. There was no sign of tracks having been tampered with.

Cinderella Girl, 14, Meets Prince Charming; More Stars Arrive for Birthday Balls Tonight

Many thousands of Washingtonians tonight will lead the Nation in the dual program of celebrating the President's birthday and contributing toward the fight against infantile paralysis.

More Hollywood stars arrived yesterday to join District residents for the dances and parties and were whisked away by busy committee members to cocktail parties, lunches, dinner parties and broadcasts.

Last-minute precautions for a "perfect" program were made last night by the general committee. Police, escorts for the visiting stars and the stars themselves received final instructions for the President's parties.

A hungry crowd of autograph seekers swarmed the airport yesterday morning to welcome, along with District officials, Lana Turner, George Raft, Wayne Morris, Maureen O'Hara and the Al Ritz of the Ritz brothers.

Later in the day the stars, including those who have been in town several days, were greeted officially at a cocktail party in the Mayflower Hotel. Given by Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Robert La Follette, Mrs. Jean Hersholt and Mrs. Charles C. Pettijohn, the party was attended by several hundred District, Federal and civic officials.

At the time the noisy crowd was greeting the airport arrivals, Wallace Beery and Carol Ann

Anna Sklepovich (right), the "Cinderella girl," meets Lana Turner at reception for film stars in Mayflower Hotel

Cinderella stepped out of the nursery book into the White House yesterday.

Her Prince Charming—rather, one of her Princes Charming—for a 1941 Cinderella must have at least two—was the President of the United States.

She came to the White House, by way of the not pleasant precincts of the Receiving Home for Children, from Gary, a coal-mining town in the mountains of southwestern West Virginia.

Her name is Anna Sklepovich. She's large for her age (almost 14) and has light hair and shy gray eyes. The way she blushed with happiness is a thing to remember.

Anna's second Prince Charming is George Allen, former District Commissioner. He will take her to the President's Birthday Balls tonight with all the celebrities from Hollywood and to the big dinner before. Meantime, he has arranged for her to stay at one of the city's swankiest hotels.

Anna is the little girl who tried to see the President Tuesday but was turned away by Secret Service agents because the invitation she carried was not genuine. It had been written, it developed, by practical jokers back home.

The President read in yesterday morning's Post how the Secret Service had shunted Anna to the Receiving Home, where she spent the night. He told his secretary, Stephen Early, it would be a good idea to turn the tables on the jokers and rescue

House Committee Approves Aid-Britain Powers Until 1943; Convoys Not Expressly Barred

Time for 'Peaceful' And Effective Help For Britain Grows Short, Stimson Says

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Congress may be facing its last opportunity to aid Britain effectively by peaceful methods, Secretary of War Stimson yesterday told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Urging passage of the Administration bill for help to opponents of the Axis, the Secretary declared it provides a way of assisting the British "by non-violent means."

"It may be the last," he gravely added.

As distinct from "military methods," Secretary Stimson said of the aid-to-Britain proposals in the bill: "It's about the last call for lunch on that kind of procedure."

Praises Bill's Flexibility

The 73-year-old Republican Cabinet officer, who ten years ago was President Hoover's Secretary of State, asserted that the bill would provide the "flexibility and effectiveness" necessary to deal with "our extraordinary situation."

As if to emphasize what speedy executive action can do, he told the committee how, at the time of the British retreat from Dunkerque, President Roosevelt had taken a step of "such overwhelming importance to our security that it's very possible we're sitting here quietly today largely because that step was taken."

President Roosevelt, said the Secretary, "took the responsibility" of sending large quantities of World War military equipment "to help outfit the men landing on the shores of Great Britain without weapons."

From many sources in England, said the Secretary, has come the information that shipment of these outmoded arms was "one of the greatest" moves toward restoration of morale and enabling the British to carry on "their magnificent defense."

Technicalities Put Aside

Secretary Stimson said that this action was taken though "many interpretations and technicalities" of existing law had to be overcome "and possibly some technicalities broken."

Secretary Stimson advocated grant of the broad powers in the pending bill "in fairness to the people who have to defend the interests of the United States now."

"You ought not to leave people who have to act, under restrictions of statutes passed in different times and for different purposes," he said.

Jurisdiction Disputed

Dayton, Ohio, Jan. 29 (AP).—A controversy over employment of four non-A. F. L. electricians today precipitated a strike of A. F. L. building trades workers at Wright Field and halted construction on a $1,550,000 Army Air Corps expansion program.

John Breidenbach, president of the Dayton Building Trades Council, reported the strike affected from 400 to 500 union members. There were no picket lines.

Col. Lester Miller, field commandant, said he was informed the electrical workers were C. I. O. unionists.

"Dayton is an A. F. L. community," said the officer, "so it's a fight. I have reported to the War Department that it is a jurisdictional dispute."

Breidenbach insisted "there is no jurisdictional dispute," asserting the electrical workers "are non-union men so far as we are concerned." He contended the American Federation of Labor policy against strikes on defense projects did not apply because the policy relates specifically to jurisdictional controversies between A. F. L. unions.

The Federal Conciliation Service assigned Michael J. Crosetto, of Cleveland, labor mediator, to the strike.

Col. Miller said Isaac Penner, president of the Penner Installation Co., of New York, employer of the electrical workers, told him the concern had a C. I. O. agreement Nation-wide in scope.

The Penner employes continued installation of equipment in a $1,000,000 dynamometer laboratory for airplane motor altitude tests.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday approved power for the President to transfer arms to Great Britain and her non-Axis allies with only four limitations, all acceptable to him.

Five sections of the lend-lease bill, including the power clause, were approved by the full committee, upholding the Administration's hand down the line. Final committee action on remaining sections and a report on the bill are expected today.

Fifteen efforts further to modify the measure, including a proposed flat ban on use of American warships to convoy British vessels, were rejected by the committee.

Four amendments the Administration previously had accepted were added to the bill. Committee votes were mainly along party lines, with a few individual ballots crossing over.

The unsuccessful effort to prohibit the use of naval vessels to convoy British supplies was made by Representative Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota.

The committee adopted instead the convoy amendment earlier approved by the Democratic majority.

This reads:

"Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorize or to permit the authorization of convoying vessels by naval vessels of the United States."

Stimson Opposed Ban

Democratic members took the position that the bill did not authorize the President to use convoys. Their

Nazis Await Hitler Speech; Topic a Secret

Some Believe He May Answer Roosevelt's Talk on Aid to Britain

By Joseph W. Grigg, Jr.
United Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Thursday, Jan. 30.—Adolf Hitler will broadcast a nation-wide "message to the German people" at 4:30 p. m. today (9:30 a. m. E. S. T.) on the eighth anniversary of the day when the late President Paul von Hindenburg made him chancellor and master of Germany's destiny.

High Nazi quarters refused to reveal where the speech would be delivered or its subject. However, it was believed the Reichsfuehrer would give some hint of plans for achieving a final victory over Britain which he has said will come in 1941.

There also was speculation that he might lash out at the United States, perhaps answering directly President Roosevelt's program of all-out aid to Britain.

In a speech before Berlin armament workers on December 10, Hitler asserted that there could be no reconciliation between the Nazi and democratic ways of life and that "work, which is our gold," could give Germany a victory over any power on earth.

That speech was delivered before Mr. Roosevelt's famous fireside chat calling upon the American people to set up an "arsenal of democracy" to aid Britain and other nations struggling against Nazi-Fascist aggression.

Hitler's speech at 9:30 a. m. Washington time today may not be broadcast here. Only one station, WJSV, was considering it and will only put it on the air if listening in proves it of "sufficient interest."

Sharp, Brief Quake Jolts Los Angeles

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.—The Los Angeles area was jolted late today by a sharp earthquake lasting about 10 seconds.

No property damage or loss of life was reported.

The shock began at 5:34 p. m. (8:34 Eastern Standard Time) and was felt in Alhambra, San Gabriel, Monrovia, Glendale, Monterey Park, Temple City, Santa Monica, Pasadena, Hollywood, Arcadia and on the Los Angeles County coastline.

The earthquake was localized. Downtown Los Angeles experienced a severe jolt. Many residents in Alhambra, San Gabriel and Monterey Park ran into the streets.

Some persons in Pasadena reported that a rumbling noise accompanied the tremor.

In Long Beach, center of the disastrous quake of March 10, 1933, the jolt was described as rather light.

The quake lasted for about 10 seconds, starting with a sort of shiver, followed by a roll. Then there were two or three bouncing movements of much vigor, especially to persons standing still or seated. But even these movements were not felt by some persons in downtown Los Angeles.

Senate Passes Bill to Provide 400 Warships

White House Gets Measure Authorizing $909,000,000 Outlay

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday passed and sent to the White House a $909,000,000 bill to authorize construction of 400 small warships and provide additional shipbuilding facilities for speeding completion of the two-ocean Navy.

Officials said that an emergency appropriation will be sought in the next few days to lay down 280 of the submarine chasers, patrol boats, and sea-going escort ships immediately as well as other hundreds of millions of dollars for new ways, shops and tools for accelerating warship construction.

Passage came without a record vote after a two-hour sectional wrangle over allocation of construction of the new ships.

Senators Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, and Brewster (Republican), of Maine, objected to a Navy Department declaration that it contemplated building most of the 400 additional ships on the Great Lakes. They declared that facilities already existed in New England to handle the program but would have to be provided elsewhere.

Other Senators, both from the Lakes regions and elsewhere, joined in the debate, several of them complaining over the distribution of defense orders to various sections of the country.

Meanwhile, the House approved a $175,000,000 appropriation bill

Treasury Hints 1st British Aid Of 3½ Billions

Bell Indicates Initial Cost; Morgenthau Asks Debt Limit Rise

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

The first installment of lend-lease aid to Britain would cost $3,500,000,000, it appeared yesterday, after Treasury officials told the House Ways and Means Committee that they expected an early "supplemental defense estimate" for that amount.

Committee members implied that a request for a supplemental appropriation of that size would be occasioned only by passage of the lend-lease bill and the first move to implement the Administration's aid-to-Britain program.

Undersecretary Daniel Bell furnished the committee the figure during Secretary Morgenthau's testimony in support of legislation to increase the national debt limit from $49,000,000,000 to $65,000,000,000.

Further requests for an increase in the debt limit were foreshadowed when Morgenthau and Bell told the committee that the supplemental estimates, added to the $28,500,000,000 already appropriated or authorized by Congress or recommended by the President for America's defense program, would push the debt close to $65,000,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year 1942.

That mark might be passed before July 1, 1942, Morgenthau indicated, unless Congress enacts a new tax bill at this session. The Treasury will be prepared to submit a bill after the March 15 income tax re-

Industrial Home School Gains Play Facilities Without Aid

Following a series of visits to District welfare institutions by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt last year, efforts were announced to improve the management of five agencies. This the fourth of a series of articles in which The Post reports what it found during a recent investigation to discover what improvements had been made.

By James D. Secrest

The Industrial Home School on Wisconsin Avenue is an excellent example of what can be made of an obsolete institution by an energetic and resourceful superintendent.

Without help of Congress or the Commissioners, Earle W. Cassie, the superintendent, has built tennis courts, a swimming pool, baseball fields, an outdoor basketball court, a handball court and an outdoor dance floor. The swimming pool, incidentally, was made possible some years ago by a $500 gift from the German Ambassador.

Cramped in buildings erected about the time of the Civil War, the Industrial Home School is located in the heart of a residential area and on a site coveted by the Federal Government because it adjoins the Naval Observatory.

Thanks to the welfare inquiry which came in the wake of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's visit, the school was given funds in the 1941 appropriations bill to purchase badly needed vocational equipment and to employ instructors.

The House sub-committee on District appropriations disliked the system of having the board of education assign whatever left-over teachers it had to the school and so provided for resident teachers under the direction of the superintendent.

Vocational training equipment has been ordered and soon the school will be teaching the boys and girls shop crafts, printing, domestic science, hair dressing and other vocations. Congress allowed $2,100 for the apparatus.

Cassie is modeling his basement workshops after those in the boys' school at the National Cathedral.

Throughout the institution are examples of conveniences, such as a dish-warmer, a water fountain and wood panels, which Cassie purchased cheaply as second-hand or discarded equipment. A $900 dishwasher allowed by Representative Ross Collins two years ago in an appropriation is one of the showpieces, however. It saves the girls in the cafeteria lots of time.

WPA mural paintings have added substantially to the appearances of recreation rooms, but scarred and faded plaster provides eyesores in other rooms.

Cassie explained that while WPA funds were allowed for a repainting job, the District refused to have the roofs repaired. Consequently, the roofs leaked and spoiled the paint. Now, after the damage has been

Greeks Mourn Metaxas, Dead With Words of Hope on Lips

By the Associated Press

Athens, Jan. 29.—Gen. John Metaxas, the "Little John" who dictated to Greece in peace and directed her aggressive defense in war, died today, whispering:

"It is not for myself that I mind, but I place my hope in the Greeks."

METAXAS

The "premier for life" died of a throat infection in his suburban home in Kiphissia at 6:20 a. m. while his soldiers were fighting in Albania for the life of Greece.

Metaxas, 70, short, chesty, dolorous of visage, had been secretly ill for three weeks.

To his countrymen he was a modern Miltiades, spiritual counterpart of the hero who led the Athenians to victory against the Persians at Marathon.

King George II, with whose approval Metaxas obtained dictatorial powers by a coup d'etat August 4, 1936, quickly named a tall and studious banker, Alexandros Korizis, to be premier.

Korizis, 55, a close colleague of Metaxas but lacking any extensive army or political experience, also will hold Metaxas' other portfolios of war, aviation, foreign affairs, navy and education.

He is pledged to carry out to the letter Metaxas' own program of "victory over the enemy and afterwards, serving and promoting the welfare of the working classes, which constitute the productive power of the nation."

Hurry, Hurry, Ladies

It's to Be a Woman's World—Men Are Fewer and Older

Step lively, ladies! The supply of men is diminishing. Besides, they're growing older.

Such is the warning of a Census Bureau forecast of population fashions issued today. It reported that although there are still more men than women in the United States, the ratio is declining and that some day there will be more women than men.

Based on an intensive study of a 5 per cent sample of the 1940 census, the bureau reported that in 1930 there were 102.5 males for every 100 females, while last year, the masculine excess was but 101.1 for every 100 women.

Europe and other "older civilizations" are characterized by having more women than men, it was said.

The report also showed that the average American is 28.9 years old, 2½ years older than in 1930 and 6 years older than in 1900.

The report found that whites constituted 89.8 per cent of the population in 1940, exactly the same percentage as in 1930. Among whites, the average age of males and females was the same, 29.4 years. The national figure is reduced by the average for nonwhites, males averaging 25.4 years and females 25 years.

Analysis of the older average age of the population disclosed that there was a decline in the number of persons under 20 years, a small increase in those between 20 and 25, and a large increase in those 65 years and older.

The bureau estimated that the number of people 65 or older increased in the last 10 years by 35 per cent, from 6,633,805 in 1930 to 8,956,209 last year. The average gain for all age groups was only 7.2 per cent.

Vinson Offers Bill to Mediate Defense Strikes

Representative Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, yesterday introduced a bill to set up a Naval Defense Labor Board and provide for a long "cooling off" period before strikes could be called in plants working on naval contracts.

The legislation offered by the chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee also would outlaw the "closed shop" on naval defense projects.

This provision would face stiff opposition in the House, Congressional leaders said yesterday, but they predicted more general support for the bulk of the bill, which is patterned after the Railway Mediation Act.

The Vinson bill declares it to be "the policy of the United States" that naval defense contractors and their employes "exhaust every possible means of settling labor disputes without stoppage of work."

Vinson said the bill applies only to naval contractors, but the measure's sweeping definition of such contractors includes anyone engaged in "the production of arms, implements of wa., articles or supplies" for the Navy Department.

Each party to a labor dispute covered by the bill would be required to furnish the other party with written notice of his claims, complaints or demands. If the management and employes, with the aid of existing Federal and State conciliation services, failed to reach an agreement within 30 days, either party could give notice of its intention within 30 days to call a strike or lockout.

The three-man Naval Defense Labor Board would then be required to call both parties into conference, with any strike or lockout forbidden during the 30-day period. The board would place before the public its reports on the dispute at the end of the 30-day period.

The bill makes it unlawful "for any person, by use of force or threats or any other means, to require or attempt to require, as a condition or prerequisite of employment of any individual by a naval defense contractor that such individual be or not be a member of any labor organization." Employers are specifically forbidden "by discrimination in regard to hire or tenure of employment, to encourage or discourage membership in any labor organization."

Naval contractors also are forbidden to employ members of the German-American Bund or Communist Party or persons advocating overthrow of the American Government by force.

The Naval Defense Labor Board would be appointed by the President, subject to Senate ratification. Members would be paid $10,000 a year.

Self-Sufficient South America Is Proposed

By the United Press

Montevideo, Uruguay, Jan. 29.—Proposals of an unprecedented character calculated eventually to transform the entire South American continent into a self-sufficient economic unit have been submitted by the Argentine government to the River Plate Regional Economic Conference in session here.

They include:

1. Creation of a customs union between Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia.

2. Eventual extension of the union through analagous accords to all the other South American countries.

3. Unilateral granting by Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay of the most favored nation treatment to Paraguay and Bolivia, the two landlocked states in South America.

Such a program is primarily aimed to end the economic subservience of South America to foreign economic systems by creating a self-sufficient unit of unparalleled dimensions and resources.

The initial Argentine project of transforming Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, Bolivia and Argentina into a customs union would, in the minds of the authors, form the framework of a continental union to which the other South American countries eventually would adhere.

President Roosevelt's budget message predicted a debt of $58,000,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year 1942, excluding the cost of aid to democracies overseas.

Morgenthau testified that the Treasury's borrowing power, under present law, would be exhausted by June 1. The balance of borrowing authority on January 1 was $887,000,000, under the general debt limitation of $45,000,000,000, he said, and $2,764,000,000 under the special authorization of $4,000,000,000 for defense borrowing, voted by the last Congress.

The debt limit bill, Morgenthau explained, would remove the present "partition" between defense and general borrowing, subject all future issues of Federal securities to Federal taxation and provide "greater flexibility in our financing operations."

The present tax exemption on Federal securities "is worth nothing to the poorest class of subscribers" and "a great deal to those in the very high income brackets," the Treasury chief said. "Such preferential treatment to this latter class is incompatible with democratic financing of the defense program and should be removed."

Morgenthau called for a policy of strict economy in nondefense expenditures, asserting that such estimates "should be reexamined with a magnifying glass to make certain that no more funds are granted than are absolutely essential in existing circumstances."

All Kinds of Investors

The bill would amend the Second Liberty Bond Act, Morgenthau explained, to provide "greater flexibility in types of securities which may be offered to meet requirements of various classes of investors." Workers, farmers and school children are counted among the potential investors in low-denomination bonds, saving certificates and stamps, he said.

"There is every reason why a substantial part of the savings made possible by the current increase in employment should be conserved by investment in United States Government securities,' he continued. In this way, he said small investors could contribute to their own security as well as the national defense.

"I can think of no other single way in which so many people can become partners of their Government in facing this emergency," Morgenthau concluded.

Panama Road Nearly Ready

Other defense developments yesterday:

Congress received a detailed report of what was done with the $239,000,000 "blank check" fund it voted to President Roosevelt last year, which showed that a $37,555,142 balance still exists.

Commissioner T. H. MacDonald, of the Public Roads Administration, disclosed, in testimony before the House Appropriations Committee made public yesterday, that a military highway across the Isthmus of Panama, "adequate to carry 60-ton tanks that are contemplated" will be completed by this summer. The lack of a highway across the Isthmus has been considered a definite defense weakness of the Panama Canal.

The Navy recalled Commander Albert E. Schrader, its attache in Berlin, to Washington. As Rear Admiral Robert L. Ghormley, observer in London, was called back last week, there was speculation that the high command wanted comparable first-hand accounts of the naval developments of the war.

Bomber as Fast as 'Homesick Angel Bound for Heaven'

Los Angeles, Jan. 29 (AP).—Northrop Aircraft Co. said today its new patrol bomber has passed all flight tests tand exceeded performance expectations by at least 10 per cent.

"It's like a homesick angel bound for heaven," commented Moye Stephens, Northrop test pilot.

International Harvester Company Employes Strike

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—A strike of C. I. O. unionists at the huge Chicago tractor works of the International Harvester Co. today halted production on defense orders evaluated by the management at "several million dollars."

The walkout, affecting 6,500 workers, was called shortly after 1:30 p. m.—24 hours after the C. I. O. farm equipment workers organizing committee had broken off negotiations with the firm on demands for wage increases and other adjustments.

Several hundred strikers clustered in picket formations near the gates. Employes who arrived for duty on the shift starting at 4 p. m. made no effort to enter.

A company spokesman said the concern has a total of more than $10,000,000 in defense orders in its various plants, and a substantial proportion alloted to the tractor works. It also produced castings and forgings used in defense orders at other branches, he added.

The F. E. W. O. C., which has a collective bargaining contract covering the tractor works, has demanded elimination of piece work, a minimum wage of 75 cents an hour and compensation for Selective Service selects.

David T. Roadley, a Federal conciliator, had conferred with representatives of both sides shortly before the strike.

8 Convicted in TVA Dynamite Plot

Chattanooga, Tenn., Jan. 29 (AP).—Eight members of a union charged with conspiracy to dynamite TVA lines serving a strike-bound plant were convicted today in federal court.

The eight, members of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (C. I. O.), are subject to a maximum of two years imprisonment and fines of $10,000. Counsel moved for a new trial.

Those convicted were Mitchell Clifton Anderson of Bessemer, Ala., organizer for the union; John Edward Simonds, Felton Moore Woodward, Earl Hubbard, John David Queen, Robert Lee Rhodes, Robert Lee Ballew and Marion Luther Ellis, members of the local union in Polk county.

Five others were acquitted by the jury. Eight previously had been freed by directed verdicts.

War and Navy Offices to Tighten Visiting Rules

Strict regulations limiting admission to the War and Navy Departments to persons on official business will go into effect Saturday, the two agencies announced yesterday.

Effective February 1, all officers and employes working at the Navy and Munitions buildings must wear special badges containing their photographs visible at all times. Visitors may enter only at designated doors and be interviewed in the office of the War Department Provost Marshal's office or the Navy Department security officer.

The regulations, which have been in preparation for weeks, require that visitors who can show they are entitled to admittance will be issued passes and escorted to the office with which they have business. An escort must also call to usher them out of the building.

Special property passes must be obtained by employes or visitors who carry any parcels in or out of the buildings. Other special passes are necessary for entering the buildings at night or on Sundays or holidays.

GHQ Airforce Moves Headquarters March 15

Army officials said yesterday that transfer of the GHQ Air Force headquarters from Langley Field, Va., to Bolling Field will take place about March 15.

Approximately 100 officers and enlisted men will be involved in the shift, which was ordered October 26. Additional administration and other buildings costing $695,250 have been authorized at Bolling Field to house the air force command.

Time and Nazis Won't Wait, Stimson Warns Senators

The secretary told the committee under questioning of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, that he did not believe the United States Army had turned over any "flying fortresses" or even any "first line planes" to Great Britain. "We have consented," he said, "to deferment of our own orders for a certain number of planes to British orders placed with the same manufacturers, thus allowing the British to get theirs first."

Secret Hearing Granted

However, to questions by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, on the relation between Britain's "immediate needs" and this country's present equipment, Secretary Stimson suggested that the answers be given in executive session. The committee assented, but the time for the secret hearing was left undetermined.

In evident opposition to the proposed amendment prohibiting American naval convoys to Britain, Secretary Stimson said he thought it would be "a very unfortunate thing" for Congress to attempt to "fetter" the President5s constitutional powers over the Army and Navy.

"No one can tell what will happen in the course of a war like that going on in Europe today," said the witness, "a war getting nearer and nearer this country in its effects."

He stated, however, that he had no objections to amendments requiring the President to make reports to Congress on the operation of the measure, and also imposing "a reasonable time limitation on the bill."

The Secretary declared, after a query by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, that all the Army staff officers he had conferred with believe that restrictions in past legislation on sending arms to Britain are "very injurious to the interests of this country."

He said he was referring to the provision that the Chief of Staff must guarantee that military equipment sought to be disposed of is not essential to national defense.

He said he thought the fact that the bill would permit British ships to be repaired in American ports (for longer than the period normally allowed by international law) "might be the means, in case of disaster to the British Isles, by which we should be able to save the remnants of the British fleet."

Unlike Secretaries Hull and Morgenthau who preceded him on the witness stand this week, Secretary Stimson showed himself willing to discuss the powers granted by the bill to the President. Both Senators Clark and La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, quizzed him at length on the phraseology of the measure.

The Secretary vigorously denied Senator Clark's contention that the bill's phrase "notwithstanding the provisions of any other law" would enable the President to disregard such labor legislation as the Wagner, Walsh-Nealey and Wage-Hour Acts.

He also opposed Senator Vandenberg's suggestion that the bill might be amended to specify the countries whose defense is "vital to the defense of the United States" instead of leaving the choice up to the President.

Might Be Embarrassing

Such a provision "might cause very great embarrassment," said the witness, adding that this country might be suddenly called on to extend aid, for instance, to "certain portions of North Africa."

"We are not seeking a loan to Great Britain," said the Secretary. "We are really seeking to purchase her aid in our defense. We are buying—not lending. We are buying our own security while we prepare. . . . We are buying time from the only nation which can sell us that time."

"Granted that Britain survives the crisis of this coming spring and summer (and the passage of this bill will go far to stiffen the morale necessary for her to survive that crisis) the probability of an ultimate solution in favor of the democracies would be overwhelming."

House Lend-Lease Draft Approved

amendment, they said, merely clarified that position. But they refused to interfere with any convoy power the President might have as Commander in Chief or in any existing statute.

Before House and Senate hearings, Secretary of War Stimson had opposed a flat convoy ban, contending yesterday that the President has power under the Constitution to direct naval movements, and this power should not be limited.

The three other Administration amendments adopted by the committee limit the life of the bill to slightly more than two years, require consultation of Army and Navy chiefs before lending defense materials, and provide for reports to Congress at least every 90 days.

The approved consultation amendment stipulated that no defense article "shall in any way be disposed of under this paragraph, except after consultation with the Chief of Staff of the Army or the Chief of Naval Operations of the Navy, or both."

Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, sought to tighten this amendment to require certification of the President's arms loans, but his motion was defeated.

The committee's time limit on the President's powers reads:

"Neither the President nor the head of any department or agency shall, after June 30, 1943, exercise any of the powers conferred . . . except to carry out a contract or agreement with such a government made before July 1, 1943."

Representative Jonkman (Republican), of Michigan, offered a motion for a one-year limitation, but was defeated.

The fourth Administration concession, requiring periodic reports, was approved in the following form:

"The President from time to time, but not less frequently than once every 90 days, shall transmit to the Congress a report of operations under this act except such information as he deems incompatible with the public interest to disclose. Reports provided for under this subsection shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Senate or the Clerk of the House . . . if the Senate or the House of Representatives . . . is not in session.

Representative Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, unsuccessfully attempted to amend this to remove Presidential discretion to withhold certain information.

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, vainly attempted to write into the bill a provision that "no vessels of the United States Navy shall be disposed of to any belligerent nation without the consent of Congress."

He failed also in an effort to ban use of American ports to repair, outfit or recondition British vessels.

Representative Tinkham (Republican), Massachusetts, who is opposed to the bill in any form, tried to bar possible arms loans to Soviet Russia. His amendment, too, was beaten.

Tinkham went almost immediately to the House floor to attack recent lifting of the "moral embargo" on plane shipments to the Soviet.

Tinkham charged an "appeasement" policy toward Russia and declared it might result in joining the arsenal of the democracies with the arsenal of Communism and Germany."

With more than half of the bill already approved, the committee will complete action early today. Tomorrow Bloom will go before the House Rules Committee to ask a green light for the measure in the House Monday.

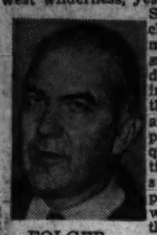
Folger Opposes Bidding Rule At SEC Hearing

A Washington securities dealer, descendant of pioneer livestock men who helped settle the Northwest wilderness, yesterday told the Securities Exchange Commission that the small securities dealer has come into his own in the last decade and that a SEC proposal to require competitive bidding for securities or public utilities would reverse that trend.



FOLGER

The witness, J. C. Folger, of the local firm of Folger, Nolan & Co. was one of several representatives of smaller securities firms who testified in the third day of SEC hearings on the proposed rule to outlaw "inside track" sales of utility issues.

Calling his firm "small country dealers," Folger told the SEC Commissioners that he has been opposed to competitive bidding in principle since boyhood.

Cites Livestock Sales

"My father and grandfather were pioneer livestock men," Folger related, "first in Iowa and later in Washington State. In the communities where we lived it was customary for the farmers to have livestock sales in the fall. Everybody attended these sales, partly to see their neighbors, partly to get a free lunch and possibly to bid on livestock."

"My father and grandfather," Folger continued, "never bought livestock at these auctions, and one of my first lessons was that such purchases were unsound, since a man would become so interested in beating out his neighbor and showing everybody that he had as much money and could bid as well as the next one that he would find himself paying $60 or $70 for a horse that was probably worth $40."

"When he got the horse home he might find it had a spavin," Folger told the assembled audience of about 200 bankers, brokers, dealers and lawyers.

Citing this humble example from his youth, Folger concluded that competitive bidding would be injurious to the small securities dealer and that underwriting would resolve into "a few large bidders," tending to destroy the dealer-customer relationship;

Clevelander Favors Bidding

Cyrus Eaton, Cleveland financier, favored the compulsory bidding rule, however, saying it would "open and stimulate the capital markets of the country."

Eaton said in this connection that "the biggest thing to be done is to put idle money to work." He expressed belief competitive bidding would have that effect.

Eaton declared that "the New York banks, like the New York Stock Exchange, want to do all the business in New York." That, he asserted, is impractical.

Chapin Newhard of St. Louis, another witness, said that a poll taken Monday showed that 70 St. Louis dealers were opposed to the SEC recommendation and only two favored it.

"Those figures are fresh," Newhard testified. "I am confident that they represent the sentiment of dealers throughout the country."

Two New Classes Called by Britain

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—Great Britain called men of 18 to 19 and 37 to 40 to the colors today and announced that future exceptions to military service would depend more on the actual job a man is doing than on his age or listed occupation.

Employers will be required to advise the labor ministry whether employes should be put on a list of "protected" work which will be defined in consultation with the supply services.

Before his hurried departure the Ambassador held a final discussion with Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, with whom he has been discussing settlement of claims for lands expropriated from Americans in Mexico and various other problems.

House Gets $1,404,576,838 Nondefense Supply Bill

Trimmed only $8,943,500 under budget estimates, the first nondefense supply bill was reported to the House yesterday carrying $1,404,576,838 for the executive office and independent establishments.

The measure, which will be voted on today, includes $9,720,000 for construction in the District but authorizes no new projects. The appropriation covers $5,000,000 for the General Accounting Office, $2,400,000 for a site and building for the west central heating plant, $200,000 for annex to the Government Printing Office, and $920,000 for the acquisition of a site for a State Department annex.

Included also is $700,000 for the purchase of property south of Independence Avenue, between Seventh and Twelfth Streets Southwest, to carry out a street-widening program and $500,000 for installation of facilities at the National Archives Building.

Vote New Emergency Fund

The committee approved a new emergency fund of $100,000,000 for disbursement by the President "through miscellaneous agencies," and authorized contracts for an additional $25,000,000.

The committee also allowed $100,000,000 to liquidate contractural obligations incurred by the President in 1940 in connection with War and Navy Department activities.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission was given $1,300,000 in the bill, or $450,000 more than last year. Of this amount $850,000 is lent to the District under the Capper-Cramton Act for additional park purchases.

Included in the estimate is $450,000 for highway and parkway improvements in Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties. This is made up of $200,000 for the purchase of land along the upper Potomac River in connection with the George Washington Memorial Parkway, $50,000 for the purchase of property extending from the District line south toward Fort Foote and Fort Washington, and $200,000 for property in the Anacostia Valley.

The committee recommended the full budget estimate of $160,000,000 to replenish the Maritime Commission's ship construction funds, plus contractural authorizations totaling $180,000,000.

Hatch Fund Cut

The bill carries an additional $3,000,000 for national defense activities of the Civil Service Commission and smaller increases for other agencies whose duties have multiplied during the emergency. The committee explained that the appropriation will be $151,104 less than the amount available to the commission in the current year owing to allocation of emergency funds.

Pointing out that only 70 cases charging political activity in violation of the Hatch Act have come before the Civil Service Commission, the committee cut a budget estimate of $100,000 to $25,000 for this function.

U. S. Footed Bill For Florida Visits, Report Reveals

The House Appropriations Committee disclosed yesterday that more than 700 Federal employes visited Florida last winter at Government expense.

E. W. Bell, audit chief of the General Accounting Office, testified in executive hearings on the independent offices supply bill that an investigation showed the trips were made between November 15, 1939, and March 1, 1940.

"Did they find a lot of business in Florida at that time of year?" inquired Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois.

Smith Fears U. S. Rule of Insurance

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith said tonight he had "definite information" that the Federal Government would move to regulate life insurance companies.

Speaking at the annual dinner of the medical staff of St. Vincent's Hospital, Smith, himself a director of the New York Life Insurance Co., said that "because the life insurance companies have tremendous assets for investment, they are considered business monopolies."

"That is the pretext on which they are now being investigated," he added, "and that will be the pretext for Federal Government control."

Officials Get $150 Radio Sets to Hear FM Broadcasts

All members of the Federal Communications Commission and several department heads have been supplied with modern $150 radio receivers in order to listen in on the new frequency modulation broadcasts at home.

This was disclosed during hearings on the independent offices supply bill, a transcript of which was released yesterday.

E. K. Jett, chief engineer, said that he had recommended the purchase of the sets, which, incidentally, have phonograph recording attachments, so that the commissioners could listen to FM broadcasts in the quiet of their homes.

Washington has only one FM station and it transmits only a few hours daily.

Bills to Outlaw Strikes Scored By Murray

By Alfred Friendly.
Post Staff Writer

Inclusion of labor in the councils of industry and Government, rather than "repressive, so-called no-strike legislation, impossible of practical operation," is the solution of labor disputes in the Nation's armament program, Philip Murray, C. I. O. chairman, declared in an interview yesterday.

Acceptance by management and defense officials of C. I. O. proposals such as the "industry council," "Reuther" plan and newly announced steel plan would do more to suppress labor troubles than any other means, Murray said.

Stating that he saw no reasons to abandon his organization's efforts for closed-shop contracts, Murray pointed out that under these agreements arbitration replaces strikes.

Makes Union Responsible

Without a closed shop contract, which "crystallizes" in the union responsibility for the entire working force, the union cannot give employers this protection, Murray explained.

The gray-haired successor to the position of John L. Lewis declared that there was no fear among laymen, Defense Commission or other Federal labor administrators of a strike wave delaying the defense program.

"The record of the C. I. O. in fulfillment of its contractural obligations is unexcelled," he added.

"We live up to our contracts, our promises and our commitments." Speaking of recent Congressional interests in laws to outlaw work stoppages on defense orders, Murray said. "Any repressive, socalled no-strike legislation would be impossible of practical operation. Its effect would be to destroy workers' morale and to create an impression that there was lack of confidence of certain Congressional leaders in the sincerity, and purpose of working men and women.

Voluntary Method Best

"Personally, I am absolutely opposed to any action being taken contemplating passage of no-strike legislation. My candid judgment, based upon 30 years of experience in the field of collective bargaining in almost all of the principal defense industries of the United States, is that better results can be obtained through the tried method of voluntary cooperation between leaders of industry and labor in effecting amicable adjustments of disputes as they arise."

Murray said that acceptance of the C. I. O. production plans would "leave within the councils of industry, labor and Government a positive, voluntary solution of labor-management relationships, by bringing industry closer to labor, labor closer to industry, and both closer to the Government."

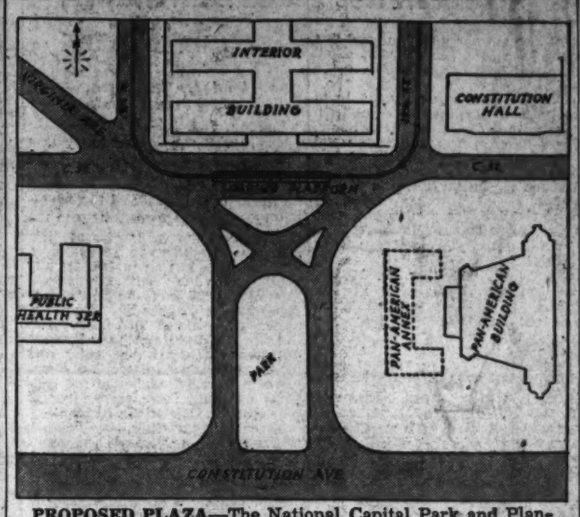
He is said to be eager to see Lieut. Gen. Marshal Cornwall and other officers of Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell's staff, now expected in Istanbul Friday.

Chart Issued to Ease Criticism Of Pan-American Annex Plan



PROPOSED PLAZA—The National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday released this drawing of the plaza its members plan south of the Interior Building and the location proposed for the Pan American Building Annex. Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets would be rerouted, effecting a traffic "bottleneck" at West Virginia Avenue

Conspicuously lacking the signature of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, the diagram which shows how Virginia Avenue will be closed to provide a site for the Pan American Union annex was made public yesterday.

The plan and accompanying explanation were given out by the Interior Department to soften criticism of the scheme which has arisen since it was made known by The Post last Friday.

Chairman Frederic A. Delano, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and a member of the special committe that approved—but not unanimously—the avenue-closing idea asked the Interior Department to publish the diagram to show exactly what the change entails.

The official setup, then, is as follows:

A traffic plaza, comparable to the Union Station's perplexing plaza, will be built, bounded by Constitution Avenue on the south, Nineteenth Street and Virginia Avenue on the west, C Street on the north and Eighteenth Street on the east.

Parking Triangle

With Virginia Avenue closed between Eighteenth and Nineteenth, eastbound traffic on the busy diagonal thoroughfare will have to detour to Constitution Avenue, upon reaching Nineteenth Street, then continue eastward on Constitution.

Westbound traffic on Constitution wishing to go up Virginia Avenue will have to turn north into Eighteenth Street and west at C Street, then proceed up Virginia Avenue from its intersection with Nineteenth.

A parking quadrangle, about the size of a football gridiron, will take the place of the present triangle between the new Interior Building and the Navy Building.

The Interior Department press release which Delano inspired points out that this section of greensward, together with "surrounding areas," will "provide a setting for memorials to great leaders of Central and South America."

The special committee appointed by President Roosevelt and headed by Secretary of Interior Ickes has worked on the problem for nearly two years. The plan finally approved by four of the five members, Commissioner Hazen excepted, is known as "Study O," indicating that it was the fifteenth in a series of experiments.

Hazen Opposed Avenue Change

Signers of the diagram were, besides Ickes and Delano, Chairman Gilmore D. Clarke of the Fine Arts Commission, and Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union.

Originally, the Union planned to build its annex on the triangle directly west of the main building. Congress authorized use of the land and initial work was begun—construction of a tunnel under Eighteenth Street connecting the headquarters edifice with the proposed annex.

Subsequently, however, Secretary Ickes said he didn't like the idea of a building going up just to the south of the proposed site of the new Interior Building, holding that the latter's vista would thus be blocked. Result was that the original annex site, which would have involved no change to Virginia Avenue, Eighteenth Street or Nineteenth Street, was abandoned.

Commissioner Hazen was a dissenter to "Study O" because it means the alteration of Virginia Avenue, which is heavily traveled both by commercial traffic and passenger cars going to and from the Rock Creek-Potomac Parkway.

At meetings of the special committee, he tangled frequently with Delano on just what was to be done to the avenue, Hazen insisting it would be closed by "Study O" and Delano replying that the change was a "deflection," not a closing.

Wayne Morris Seeks to Join Naval Reserve

Wayne Morris, motion picture star, came to Washington yesterday to take part in President Roosevelt's birthday ball celebration today—and volunteered for service in the national defense.

Between sight-seeing trips, Morris slipped into the Navy Department and called on Capt. Irving M. McQuiston of the Bureau of Aeronautics, an old friend, and told him he wanted to get into the Naval Reserve, special aviation duty.

Morris is a pilot, and flies his own plane. However, he didn't have with him necessary papers—his college records from Los Angeles City College, birth certificate, etc. So McQuiston told him to make his application at the Naval Aviation Base at Long Beach, Calif., when he returns home.

Air Corps Plans For 50,000 Planes

The Army Air Corps has called upon the Civil Service Commission to provide ground crews for 50,000 planes in 1942.

Commissioner Arthur S. Flemming told the House subcommittee on appropriations there are now 8,000 civilians employed as mechanics in the Air Corps, that 20,000 more will be needed to take care of plane servicing next year and 8,000 additional to take care of operations at air bases.

Pro-Nazi Press Urges Truce In Rumania

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Jan. 29.—Rumania was warned today by her pro-German newspapers to declare immediately a one-year truce on all ideological conflicts "because of the international situation."

One article, speaking of reports of intensified Russian armament, declared "we cannot afford experiences at home when there are signs of a storm in the neighborhood," even though "we do not know in which direction it will rage."

Another article predicted that "the motorized Germany army will sweep through the Balkan peninsula like a hurricane within a short time to deliver a blow so crushing that the enemy will never recover its sense."

Both of these were written from Rome by Panfil Seicaru, Balkan editor who is reputed to have close Axis connections.

The ministry of the interior announced that casualties in the Iron Guard revolt last week totaled 370 dead and 444 wounded in Bucharest alone.

Gen. Ion Antonescu and his new military government removed Iron Guard leader Greceanu, minister to Berlin, without explanation. Nothing was known as to what had happened to him.

The house of Radu Ghineau, a guardist and now minister to Spain, was raided, a great quantity of documents was seized and Ghineau's mother was taken into custody.

All metallurgical industries were militarized.

A special list issued tonight showed that 498 Iron Guardists had been arrested thus far for fomenting last week's revolution, but the names of Horia Sima, the Iron Guard leader, and most of his important associates did not appear.

No official announcement has yet been made about Sima's whereabouts, although two days ago it was reported that he was in custody.

Among those in hand were Radu Gyr, director of the National Theater, and Col. Zavoianu, a former police prefect.

Gen. Coroama, commander of the First Army Corps, resigned and no reason for his action was given.

Rumania's most anti-Semitic paper blamed the rebellion on "a communist rabble dressed in green shirts who carried their hatred to the utmost ferocity with a bloodthirstliness peculiar to communism."

"In this way, they degraded the reputation of a quiet, gentle people in the eyes of foreigners staying in Rumania, offering them a spectacle such as has not been seen before even in the jungles of Mexico."

Thailand Envoy 'Foxes' Lions On Indo-China Dispute Thrust

Mom Rajawongse Seni Pramoj, the Minister from Thailand (Siam), spoke at the Lions Club luncheon at the Mayflower yesterday, and proved himself both a diplomat and a wit.

PRAMOJ

He sketched the background of the conflict between Thailand and French Indo-China, beginning with France's seizure of nearly half of Thailand's territory in the latter part of the 19th century. He told how Thailand had been trying to get back two narrow strips of natural frontier along the Mekong River. Then he told how fighting broke out in November, and how, finally, Japan had arranged to settle the dispute between Thailand and French Indo-China.

At this point, Minister Pramoj agreed to answer questions and one of the Lions, Dr. Riley Moore, asked one about land-hungry Japan in the role of mediator.

Wasn't it like a fox coming in to arbitrate a dispute between two rabbits in a cabbage patch? Dr. Moore asked. And wasn't the fox likely to fatten up the rabbits and then eat both of them? What did Thailand's minister have to say to this?

The slender diplomat looked over at Dr. Moore and smilingly replied: "What would you do if you were a rabbit?"

The Lions, including Dr. Moore, roared their appreciation of the riposte, and later Ralph Pollio, president of the club, told Mr. Pramoj that he was a true diplomat.

Incidentally, Luang Bhakdi, second secretary of the Thailand Legation, told members that Thai was the traditional name of the country, and that Siam was an English name for it, one that wouldn't be recognized by the natives themselves.

U.S. Asks Firms Drop Pro-Nazi Agents Abroad

By Lloyd Lehrbas

Associated Press Staff Writer

The United States Government, it was learned yesterday, has instituted an aggressive drive to have American firms "house-clean" their Latin-American branches of all anti-American or pro-Axis personnel.

Convinced by confidential reports of widespread subversive activities in most of the 20 American republics, the State Department and other vitally interested Government agencies are applying "diplomatic pressure" to enlist the help of export industries in combating the situation.

The objects of the "house cleaning" fall into two general classes:

1. Employes or agents of United States oil, steel, automobile, electrical supply and other firms in Latin-America who are considered potential "Fifth Columnists" or who have engaged in anti-American or pro-Axis propaganda and other activities, often financed by money derived from their American connections.

2. Firms or individuals in South and Central American nations who sell or transship materials obtained from the nited States to the Axis powers, or any other foreign country that would be unable to obtain the supplies direct from the United States because of export restrictions. (Latin-American countries are able to obtain such supplies because hemisphere nations are specifically exempt from virtually all export embargoes.)

The "house-cleaning" campaign, it was learned, already has brought about the discharge of a number of agents and employes suspected of hostile allegiance and operations. Those ousted will be replaced either by employes from the United States or loyal citizens of the American republic in which the branches are located.

The State Department, it was learned, has compiled a list of individuals and firms in the 20 countries, who are "suspect" either of anti-American or pro-Axis propaganda and activities, or of supplying American materials to the Axis powers.

Greeks Isolate 2 Italian Battalions

Athens, Jan. 29 (INS).—Two Italian battalions have been completley cut off from their base in the central Albanian sector and heavy Fascist counter-attacks have been repulsed with disastrous results on all fronts in the last 24 hours, the Athens radio announced late tonight.

Fighting continued to be heaviest in the central sector where general Ugo Cavallero apparently is making a supreme effort to crack the Greek lines, the Athens announcer added. At the same time, two other Fascist detachments are isolated and hiding in a forest after their movements were broken up by Hellenic forces.

Turks Believe Nazi-Russian War Is Certain

By G. E. R. Gedye

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Turkey, Jan. 29.—That the definite refusal by Vyacheslaff M. Molotoff, the Soviet premier and foreign commissar, of a German demand that Russia force Turkey to stand aside while Germany carried out her spring campaign in the Balkans was the real result of M. Molotoff's visit to Berlin, is asserted by competent observers who have returned here after a visit to Czecho-Slovakia.

They also bring evidence that German efforts to represent M. Molotoff's visit to Berlin as satisfactory really concealed a great disappointment. Special preparations had been made in Czecho-Slovakia to play on the Slav feelings for Russia. The German garrison had arranged illumination and musical programs by military bands. Everything was ready for a great celebration of Soviet Russia's open military alliance with the Nazis when a telegram from Berlin ordered the cancelation of all festivities.

From that day onward, high Nazi officials have shown increased hostility toward Russia. This change of attitude has been warmly welcomed in Czarist-Russian emigre circles in the protectorate. The change was made evident at the Prague Nazi party center in the course of a debate on Reichsfuehrer Hitler's speech to the armament workers. The local leaders asked why, if Britain was to be vanquished by sheer weight of high explosives which would wipe out her cities and populations and by the German counter-blockade, it was necessary for the Fuehrer to demand further intensification of production of tanks.

In reply, the gauleiters were told:

"The war will not end with the crushing of Britain. That is only the first phase. The next will be the invasion of the Soviet Union. This will call for a large quantity of long-range armaments. The second stage will be long but will not cause heavier losses or suffering for the civilian population than the present campaign, for European Russia will be rapidly cleaned up and the Ukraine wheatlands then made available to feed us. When that is effected we shall take our time over the remaining stages of the war."

According to Father Volosin, the former Premier of Ruthenia, a highly-placed German officer has just told him that the Nazi Party made a mistake when it went into the war against Britain before having secured an economic basis through the previous liquidation of Stalinist Russia. This, the officer said, would have enabled Germany to have faced complacently a war of many years duration against the British Empire.

De Valera Warns Eire to Expect Economic Squeeze

Dublin, Jan. 29 (AP).—Eamon De Valera, Ireland's Brooklyn-born premier, told the nation by radio tonight that it must "prepare for the worst" on the question of imported supplies and announced rationing of tea for the Irish.

The Prime Minister also said gasoline would be available only for doctors, clergymen, and essential services for the time being.

De Valera said Ireland had been in danger of military attack and would remain in danger until peace returned to Europe. He warned the nation to build its defenses.

"The other danger, now, is the economic one," he went on. "The belligerents in blockading each other are blockading us.

"We have not a moment to lose in preparing for the worst in regard to all those supplies that come to us from abroad. . . . It would be foolish if we prepared for anything less than the worst."

Nazis Too Busy For Invasion, British Think

By Drew Middleton,

Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Jan. 29.—A British military authority suggested today that the expected early attempt of the Germans to invade England might be abandoned because of the necessity of giving large-scale help to the Italians and the exigencies of Nazi military adventures in the Balkans.

If the Germans do in fact try the thrust across the Channel, he added, they will time it to begin "before American aid becomes too pronounced."

As to the Balkans, the informant declared that Nazi mechanics and technical troops in civilian dress were preparing airfields in Bulgaria and that there were eight to ten German divisions in Rumania.

These preparations, he added, might signal a Nazi drive southwards to Salonika to isolate the Greeks in Albania, and, with a strong concentration of bombers, to attempt to close the Mediterranean to large British convoys.

Army Spread Out

Despite all this, he said that the German army, large as it is, is spread out from Narvik to Massena and from Brest to Bucharest and has large garrisons—for example 70 divisions in Poland—that are "in ticklish position."

This authority, surveying the military situation, said he saw it thus:

The battle of Britain: When and if the invasion comes, it probably will be accompanied by attacks on Ireland for diversion, but "the real danger spot" is on the southeast coast from the Wash to Southampton, where the offensive would have the support of fighter aircraft from French bases. They might land, said the spokesman, "but we will blow 'em off the beaches."

Spain: Indications are that the Spanish will not give the Germans a free passage through to attack Gibraltar and drive into North Africa. Formal opposition by the battered Spanish army might be slight. But "certain plans have been made to meet eventualities."

France: The Germans might occupy the rest of France, but should they do this "it is possible that French forces in the Colonial Empire, plus the fleet, would fight from outside bases."

Help Promised Turks

Turkey: Will fight if the Germans move on Salonika "and we are in a position to give her considerable help."

Italy: "Germany cannot afford to let her fall out of the war. As a result, German troops and aircraft are moving through Italy in considerable numbers."

North Africa: Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British commander, "can no longer afford to take the chances he did, because of the presence of the German air force. The matter of supporting Wavell has become more difficult."

This authority said the developing attack on Derna, Libya, slowed down momentarily because the British had encountered stronger opposition than they expected at the road junction of Mekili—70 to 80 Italian tanks and parts of two Italian divisions.

He disclosed that Britain's thus far victorious African campaign had hinged at the start on the swing of a single armored division to the rear side of Sidi Barrani, Egypt.

"It's orders," he said, "were to go and guard the road back of Sidi; it had supplies for five days. If Sidi hadn't fallen in five days we'd have withdrawn our troops and the whole campaign would have been abandoned for the time."

London Has First Raid in Ten Nights, Dover Shelled

By the Associated Press

London (Thursday), Jan. 30.—German bombers returned to the attack on London last night, their first raid in 10 nights, on the eve of the eighth anniversary of Adolf Hitler's assumption of power in the Reich, and Nazi big guns simultaneously bombarded the Dover Strait from across the English Channel.

In Dover there were no known casualties.

The aerial assault here was intermittent for four hours; the all-clear came before 10 p. m. (4 p. m., Eastern standard time). Explosives, flares and fire bombs fell.

Other areas of Britain were hit in a widespread, if scattered, assault; German planes appeared over the western and northern sections of England, East Anglia, central Scotland and the northeast coast.

In a southeast town several houses were smashed by bombs and there were casualties.

A heavy bomb that hit an officers house adjoining a hospital in the London area caused undetermined casualties. One body was recovered, and the hospital staff sought to free those feared trapped.

A train in east Anglia was reported machine-gunned.

In one northeast coastal town machine-gun bullets spattered in the streets just as the people ran at dusk to the air-raid shelters.

Here, there were periods of silence, and then the heavy, accustomed detonation of exploding bombs and the howl of the anti-aircraft guns.

It was the earliest night alarm in weeks and it came soon after the usual blackout had descended upon the city.

Greeks Mourn Metaxas, Gird To Fight On

parently ready to start a new offensive against the Greeks, Metaxas' death was viewed elsewhere in the Balkans as the heaviest blow Greece could suffer. In Belgrade, political circles termed him almost irreplaceable.

It appeared that, since the new premier lacks military knowledge, it will be largely up to Generalissimo Alexander Papagos, the Greek commander in chief, to fight off the Italians, with British counsel and aid.

Ill Since January 7

On January 7, Gen. Metaxas had attacks of dizziness, and a medical examination indicated a kidney ailment. He went back to work, however, until a tonsil infection developed. He was not even then greatly concerned, but his condition became worse and he went to bed January 19, never again to rise.

Last Sunday his condition became grave and in the next two days he was given three blood transfusions.

The chief physician of the British fleet flew from Crete to his bedside and, ironically, a German specialist was en route from Vienna when he died.

Last evening he was given the last sacrament.

Shortly before he died he recovered consciousness and his last words were addressed to the minister of home security, Constantine Maniandakis, who was by his bed.

"So there is no hope whatever?" he murmured. "You understand, Costa, it is not for myself that I mind. But I place my hope in the Greeks."

All this time, most of Greece knew nothing about the dictator's illness.

King George in proclamations issued almost simultaneously with the announcement of Metaxas' death, exhorted Greek soldiers to continue to the utmost "the struggle for our altars and homes" and referred to Metaxas as "he, who with my consent, said a proud 'no' to the brazen invaders on the historic dawn of October 28."

(In Rome, the Fascist press recorded "for history" that Metaxas "provoked war against Italy.")

King Is Confident

"I am convinced," said King George, "That . . . we shall bring the gigantic struggle now being waged by the heroic Greek army on the battlefield to a successful conclusion."

To the armed forces he said: "The loss is hard for all of us, very hard, but the Greece of which he (Metaxas) dreamed is eternal and immortal. . . . We must make up for this hard loss by strengthening our will, our decision, our daring and our insistence that justice is on our side and, therefore, we shall win.

"If the man we are mourning shall not have the joy of seeing our triumph achieved, his soul will rejoice when, from its heavenly height, it sees our arms crowned with glory. . . .

"We shall fight like one man . . . victory is ours."

National mourning was decreed and all flags were at half staff throughout Greece. The funeral will be Friday, and until then Metaxas' body will lie in state in the Athens cathedral.

Metaxas was an acknowledged military genius, a German-trained soldier, a confirmed Royalist and never a friend of Liberalism. He opposed Greek entry into the World War on the side of the Allies, but lived to call the British to his aid when the Italian invaders struck in 1940.

For forty years in and out of authority and exile, he achieved real power with the death of the republic and the return of King George II to the throne.

British Prepare To Tap Last Big Dollar Nestegg

London, Jan. 29.—Britain disclosed tonight she is about to tap her last big nestegg of dollar resources in the United States—British-owned and controlled business enterprise—to buy warplanes, ships, tanks and munitions.

A Treasury statement said the Government had spent "a very great proportion" of its gold and was selling United States securities "steadily."

Now, it was asserted, the Treasury plans to get dollars to meet purchases in America from the sale of British-owned businesses in the United States and United States companies which are controlled by Britons' shares.

A leading expert on such matters, Sir Edward Peacock, will arrive in the United States shortly, and he is expected to knock down such British businesses and companies to the highest bidder.

A treasury spokesman said he was unable to give the value of these resources because their shares are not listed on the stock exchange and "probably the owners themselves do not know what they are worth at the market."

Sir Edward is a director of the Bank of England and of Baring Bros. & Co., a banking company.

Axis Withdraws Funds From U. S.

Fear of having its American funs "frozen," the Treasury said yesterday, caused Germany to withdraw $2,393,000 and Italy $8,727,000 from the United States in October.

The Axis powers derived the funds that they withdrew largely from the sale of $3,297,000 worth of American securities. The rest was taken out of bank accounts.

This left Germany $9,054,000 and Italy $19,381,000 of short-term assets—bank accounts or other assets quickly convertible into cash. No statement was made on any long-term assets they had. Nor was data available on withdrawals since October, since the Treasury publishes international capital movement figures only after three months.

Hydra-Matic Drive*!
"GREATEST SAFETY DEVELOPMENT SINCE 4-WHEEL BRAKES!"

November 15, 1940.

Oldsmobile Division,
General Motors Sales Corp.,
Lansing, Michigan.

Gentlemen:

Records show that a high percentage of automobile accidents are traceable to driving fatigue. Because Hydra-Matic Drive eliminates hundreds of clutch and gear shift operations per hour of city driving, it unquestionably saves driving effort and reduces fatigue. It naturally follows, therefore, that a driver of a Hydra-Matic car is less liable to be involved in a fatigue-caused accident.

The ability, too, of a Hydra-Matic driver to keep both hands on the wheel at all times, because gear shifting is automatic, is an added safety advantage. Personally, I regard Hydra-Matic Drive as the greatest safety development since 4-wheel brakes.

Maritime Union Head Assails Ring Proposal

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The plan of the United States Maritime Commission to restore to American shipmasters their traditional authority, including the right to select their own crews, precipitated an angry controversy yesterday.

Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.), wrote to Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N. (retired), chairman of the Maritime Commission, asking him to "repudiate" the plan, which was announced last week by Daniel S. Ring, the commission's director of maritime personnel.

Ring, in a speech before the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association in St. Louis, said the commission had determined to enforce the right of shipmasters and their officers to select their own crews so as to guard against Communist and Nazi seamen.

President Curran, several of whose associates in charge of the National Maritime Union have been accused of being Communists, described Ring's proposal as a "labor spy" plan, and said it was "Fascist" in its implications.

The N. M. U. is the dominant seamen's union on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts. Under the Ring plan, it would continue to supply crews, but a ship captain could reject sailors he regarded as undesirable.

Referring to Ring's statement that no OGPU was needed to rid the American Merchant Marine of subversive elements, President Curran said in his letter to Admiral Land:

"Mr. Ring, in comparing this work with that of professional police organizations in Europe, made it clear what he was asking these men to do. With Hitler-like bluntness, he outlined the tasks of anti-labor stool pigeons, as performed by amateurs —telling the engineers that, if they will ferret out 'disloyal elements' (that is, militant trade unionists) there will be no need for professional services."

Termed Anti-Union

"You will not deny, we hope, that the proposals are wholly anti-union in character, Fascist in their implications. The sly hints, for example, that trade unionism and loyalty do not go hand in hand, the attempt to differentiate the patriotism of licensed and unlicensed men. And above all, the attempt to justify spy and stool pigeon work by identifying it with Americanism."

Ring had said that since a ship's officers had their own union, it was not likely they would go in for union busting" where the seamen were concerned. Curran ridiculed this statement as "spurious."

Ring's proposals, Curran continued, are so "far-reaching, so contrary to American principles that they could not have been made, in our opinion, without the direct consent, or instigation" of the Maritime Commission.

"On the off chance, however, that he (Mr. Ring) may have been speaking for himself alone and that his views are not those of the commission," the letter added, "I ask you now if you will repudiate them and assure the seamen that this proposal to set up an antilabor spy group will not be carried out."

It was said at the Maritime Commission that Admiral Land had not yet received Curran's letter. There was every indication, however, that the Maritime Commission stood squarely behind the plan as outlined by Ring. One indication was that the commission's publicity division had Ring's speech mimeographed and distributed to newspapers.

A major fight between the Maritime Commission and the National Maritime Union has been brewing for a long time. The showdown stage would appear to have arrived.

Industrial Home School Finds a Way

done, the roofs have been repaired.

Dormitories are still badly crowded and sanitary facilities are poor. The home, while well equipped with outdoor recreational facilities, has no indoor space or equipment for a gymnasium.

A library, containing 2,000 volumes is being fitted out in the school, the newest of the buildings. Frayed books are to be rebound in the vocational shops.

The Post stated incorrectly in an article on the National Training School for Girls yesterday that Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith was superintendent at the time of the construction at Muirkirk, Md., and the subsequent transfer of the white girls.

Dr. Smith did not become associated with the training school until 1936, but was superintendent when the new cottage dormitory for white girls was built on on the present site. The Post regrets the error.

Cassie, a veteran of 18 years experience, has worked out in plaster models his ideas of what would constitute a model institution for his needs. It is built in oval shape, with small dormitories and other buildings spaced about it and expansive playing fields in the center. It would cost, he estimates, about $450,000 to build.

One of the superintendent's major handicaps is his inability to retain competent instructors. Salaries are so small that the instructors move on at the first opportunity.

Yet the poorly paid staff has a custom of making annual gifts to the children. One of its recent gifts was an amplification system which carries radio music from an indoor recreation room, to the outdoor dance floor.

The Industrial Home School for colored children at Blue Plains has buildings as old and decrepit as has the white home. It is equally as crowded. But it also has new vocational shops and a comparatively new cottage dormitory.

Under the direction of Wendell P. Tucker, superintendent, the children are taught useful vocations and given a limited academic education. The commissioners, however, have resolutely refused to allow funds for a high school teacher.

The vocational program and general improvements in the educational setup are being worked out in conformance with recommendations made last summer by a committee of local educators following a first-hand study of the institution.

The 1942 estimates carry funds for laundry equipment and shoe repair apparatus to be used in vocational training. The allowance for repairs has been increased by $900.

Like its companion on Wisconsin Avenue, the Industrial School is handicapped by lack of a gymnasium and assembly hall.

P.-T. A. Moves To Correct Hazard At Playground

Efforts for correction of a playground hazard which has caused injuries to several children at Francis Scott Key School, are being made by the Parent-Teacher Association, Mrs. H. A. Hockley, president, said yesterday.

Gymnastic bars on the playground are placed above concrete, on which children have fallen and injured themselves, she explained. Earlier this week the board of the P.-T. A. voted to send a letter to the Board of Education, asking that the equipment be transferred to another part of the playground where it would have a dirt foundation, Mrs. Hockley reported.

Restrictions have now been placed on the use of the equipment by the children at recess, but the use cannot be regulated outside school hours, it was pointed out. The school is located at Hurst Terrace and Dana Place Northwest.

'Golden Blood' Donor Again to Get Legion Award

Mrs. Rose McMullen gave the 261st transfusion of her life-saving "golden blood" yesterday, breaking her own record for blood donations, over a period of time. Last night she looked forward to Nation-wide recognition of her heroism next Tuesday.

In that day National Commander Milo J. Warner, of the American Legion, will present Mrs. McMullen the legions' award as America's Outstanding Woman of 1940 in a radio ceremony in New York. She received the same award for the year 1939.

Yesterday she journeyed to Winchester, Va., for a transfusion that raised to 4½ pints the amount of blood she has donated in the last eight days, the greatest in her career in a like period.

Mrs. McMullen will "rest up for a few days," and undergo a physical examination in New York, before again launching out on her career of mercy, her husband said last night.

Influenza Cases Show Decrease Throughout U. S.

Reports received yesterday by the Public Health Service indicate that the country's influenza epidemic is broken, though not yet over.

For the first time since November, when the outbreak began on the West Coast, a reduction was noted in the total number of new cases. For the week ended last Saturday, 96,632 were reported, compared with 120,006 the previous week.

In the District, the number is higher than normal but fewer than 500 cases have been reported since January 1.

Sharpest drop was in Texas—from 30,000 to 12,000 cases. Virginia dropped from 13,092 to 12,868.

Largest numerical increase was in West Virginia, which had 14,003 new cases last week, compared with 8,867 the week previous.

Cinderella, 14, Meets Prince In White House

Anna from the misery of a crushing disappointment.

Early telephoned Allen, who is also cochairman of the Birthday Ball celebration. Allen brought Anna to the White House, introducing her as "another Birthday Ball star." Afterward she was taken to the stars' reception at the Mayflower Hotel, where she met them all.

Shows Her Fishing Trophies

Anna and Franklin Roosevelt talked about fishing. The President showed her his stuffed fish, trophies of eight years of deep-sea sport.

"But I'll bet none of these is as big as the fish in West Virginia," he told her.

When Anna first walked in to see the great man, she said she was, indeed, very glad to see him.

The President said he was glad to see her, too.

Anna also wished Mr. Roosevelt "happy birthday." He wished her the same, because today, when he becomes 59, Anna will be 14. They also laughed together at the expense of her brother, Steve, 18.

Police Sergt. L. E. Vilsack of Gary, last night cleared up, at least partially, the mystery of who was responsible for Anna's hoax invitation to the White House. The invitation was written as a postscript to a White House note to Anna and it brought her 400 miles to Washington on her first trip alone. It was written after the note reached Gary.

White House sources said they understood Anna's brother, Steve, 18, had written the "invitation" his sister discovered to be a hoax only after she was confronted by Secret Service agents in Washington.

Sergt. Vilsack said he believed it a neighborhood prank worked out by Steve and "seven or eight boys" who live near the home of Anna's father, Walter Sklepovich, a coal-mine mechanic. He said the boys also raised enough money to buy Anna a round-trip railroad ticket to see the Capital.

Anna had written the President felicitating him on his birthday and telling him her birthday also came on January 30. When Anna received the President's note of acknowledgement, the envelope had been opened, the invitation added and the ticket inserted, Vilsack said.

Anna went sightseeing after seeing the President. She stopped in a department store for a model of the Capitol as a present for her mother. Then she broadcast from WJSV with Mrs. Eleanor Lee and Richard "Red" Skelton, film actor. She answered all questions "Yes, ma'm" or "Yes, sir."

She saw a movie in the afternoon and a "show" in the evening before going to bed early in the Mayflower Hotel.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Mr. Wanger Has Another Timely Film Coming Up

'Eagle Squadron' to Extol Yanks in R. A. F.; Keith's Rushes 'Buck Privates' to Screen; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WALTER WANGER, in the forefront of motion picture producers acutely aware of the necessity of American solidarity in this time of world crisis and the need of American awakening to the emergency of the moment, has no intention of permitting his efforts in the direction of national service to rest on "Foreign Correspondent."

BELL

"Foreign Correspondent," it will be recalled, started out to be a picturization of Vincent Sheean's "Personal History," but finally eventuated as a completely different story under an entirely new title which Alfred Hitchcock's shrewd direction landed in the list of the "Ten Best Pictures of 1940," as determined by 546 professional film critics in the Film Daily's nineteenth annual poll, recently completed. It had something pretty pointed to say against the perfidy of the totalitarians and the abortive consequences of appeasement.

Over fried chicken, green salad, fruit and coffee, at luncheon yesterday, Mr. Wanger confided that wheels already are turning on his next picture, which also is planned to offer a bit of inspiration to a lagging America. It will bear the title of "Eagle Squadron" and will deal with the robust topic of Americans serving with the R. A. F. in the present war. The picture has not as yet gone into work, but the script has. It was smoothing the way for the story he wishes to tell that brought Mr. Wanger to Washington. He will be here a day or two longer and might peek in at one of the President's Birthday Balls tonight, but wouldn't be sure.

Joan Bennett, Mrs. Walter Wanger in private life, did not accompany her husband to Washington, being otherwise engaged before the Hollywood cameras at the moment. If she had, it would have been interesting to observe her trying to be as diffident about tonight's celebrations as her spouse.

Speaking of new plays, John van Druten, who flew from Hollywood to Washington to attend the "command performance" of his comedy hit, "Old Acquaintance," at the National last Sunday night, is returning to California today to begin work on his next. He has purchased a ranch at Indio and will immure himself there until it is finished. No title as yet, and it may develop into either a comedy or a tragedy. The only thing he's certain about is that it will have an American background and will revolve about two people from entirely different walks of life. If he can do as well with different walks as he did with the same one in "Old Acquaintance," he very conclusively will "have something."

And if you are looking for a good play, competently produced and directed, the chances are you will find it out at Wardman Park tomorrow night, when the Washington Civic Theater breaks out Irwin Shaw's "The Gentle People," its first production under the exclusive direction of Leon Askin. Having gibble-gabbled with Mr. Askin at some length of late, we should say that he is an ardent young disciple of the theater who knows definitely and minutely what it is all about. With 15 years experience in Europe and three concentration camps behind him, and three languages fluently at his command, perhaps he should. At any rate, there will be a fine opportunity to find out tomorrow night, when the cream of the Civic's playing group will act out Mr. Shaw's drama under Mr. Askin's command, with Ted Tenley, Richard Walsh, Lansing Hall, Rachel Sewall, Robert Langley, Edward Stevlingson, B. K. Schwartz, Natalie Core, Zack Waters, William Zuckert, Gerald Warthen and Edgar C. Faris, jr., comprising the cast.

As was to have been expected, Cecil B. DeMille's Technicolor production of "North West Mounted Police," with as star-spangled a cast as ever you clapped a dazzled eye on, moves directly from the Earle to the screen at the Metropolitan, where it continues its midcity run, beginning this morning. If you have not already seen it, you should. If you have, a second squint wouldn't hurt. You can't see all of a picture as big as "North West" at one sitting, with only two eyes in your head—even if both are good.

And as was NOT to have been expected, RKO-Keith's is coming to bat tomorrow morning with "Buck Privates," in the wake of five weeks of "Kitty Foyle," instead of with "The Invisible Woman" which, for the time being, will continue to be exactly that. "Buck Privates" is the first comedy in the field, celebrating the serio-comic effects of Uncle Sam's conscription. In the top spots it has Abbott and Costello, last seen in "One Night in the Tropics," and the Andrews Sisters, plus Lee Bowman, Alan Curtis, Jane Frazee, Nat Pendleton, Dorothy Darrell and Joe Pasternak's newest "find," Kay Leslie, one of the "thirteen baby stars of 1940." All right, you rookies, start to march.

PORTER HALL AND JEAN ARTHUR

spending a "quiet evening at home," or something, in Columbia's production of "Arizona," hailed from afar these many months as one of the most super of the super-Westerns and to be seen reasonably soon on a local screen. The grapevine has it that "Arizona" will be coming along to the Earle Theater within not too many weeks, if that is not too definite

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 29.

I don't know any studio more willing to give credit quickly than Warner Brothers, and they certainly made no mistake starring Ida Lupino and Humphrey Bogart in "High Sierra." That studio knows more about gangster pictures than any other in town, and again Raoul Walsh has romped into his own. It's a breath-taking experience from start to finish. Humphrey is not just an ordinary gangster, but his good impulses are so mixed with evil that he doesn't quite know what to do about them. How He and the little Lupino troupe! It's wonderful to watch.

HOPPER

James Stephenson, Raymond Massey and Freddie March are all up for preacher in "One Foot in Heaven." Of the three, I'd like to see it go to James Stephenson. He doesn't have to act sincere—he is.

And believe me, ministers are people I know something about. I had six of them in my own family. My Uncle John was a great tease. When carrying me "piggy-back" through the fields, he loved to pretend to drop me into a bed of thistles (which, of course, he never did)—and how he'd laugh! But I never listened to one of his prayers without getting tears in my eyes.

To come back to the subject of previews, I'd like to get this gripe off my chest. I hate to see pictures in studio projection rooms. Daytime is my work time—evening my play time. Reviewing a picture is fun. So instead of making it difficult, as the studios are now doing, why don't they forget about the people who have horned in on them, and give the press a chance—and an audience reaction?

Ran into Death Valley Scotty dining at the House of Murphy, and said, "How come? What are you doing here?" He replied, "Oh, all that movie gang moved into Death Valley and I had to move out." "That movie gang consisted of Bette Davis, Jimmy Cagney, and company making "The Bride Came C. O. D."

I know people who'd travel 3,000 miles just to get a look at 'em. But then Death Valley Scotty always was unique. He traveled 200 miles to get away from 'em!

My friend, Earl Wing, of Ontario, writes after the sneak preview of "That Uncertain Feeling:" "Lubitsch has that golden touch of King Midas. The first scene is rewarded by a thunderous roar of mirth, and is followed by a constant chuckle which lasts for 90 minutes.

"Merle Oberon, Melvyn Douglas, and Burgess Meredith really clicked. Meredith's satire of a genius is about the top. I like Miss Oberon better than in 'The Cowboy and the Lady.' And after this, if Hollywood isn't considered the style center of the world, I'll eat my hat. Wait till you see the things worn by Miss Oberon. Even the men were talking about them." Well, come up, Ernst, and take a bow.

Seeing Katherine Alexander and Susan Hayward standing near each other on the "Six Hopkins" set, Director Joe Santley walked over and said, "Katherine, this is Susan Hayward. She's your daughter, you know, in the story." After the exchange of greetings, Miss Alexander remarked to Susan, "That's what I like about pictures. One introduction—and I acquire a family. Once I got a husband and four children!"

Columbia

"Hudson's Bay," the Twentieth Century-Fox film story of the purchase of an empire with a shipload of pelts, renews its downtown revelation of Paul Muni as a be-whiskered and heavily accented French-Canadian philosopher, on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater this morning.

Mr. Muni is not quite all there is to "Hudson's Bay," but he comes close. As the far-sighted woodsman with a prophetic vision of a peaceful Utopia in the Western World, he offers a characterization remote from his more stolid rehabilitations of figures famous in history. He is here a kindly man—not averse to snuffing out a life when occasion demands—with a shrewd head for business, a quick sense of humor, a prodigious capacity for innocent roguery and a nice way with him both among the Indians and the dandies of the English court. The picture makes a great deal of this character and not much of anything of the far-flung events that attended the struggle between France and Britain for the possession of a vast territory. Betrayed by the French, Mr. Muni does business with the English, manages the redemption of an exiled British nobleman and sees a hapless romance through to a triumphant end. In the face of what it might have been, "Hudson's Bay" is just an eyelash trivial.

But there are some lusty performances scattered through its length, even so. In addition to Mr. Muni's, those of Laird Cregar, Gene Tierney, John Sutton, Virginia Field, Vincent Price, Nigel Bruce, Morton Lowry, Robert Greig, Chief Thundercloud and Montagu Love are not hard to watch. The usual short-reels complete the bill.

China Collector

Eddie Buzzell directing Ruth Hussey and Robert Cummings in "Free and Easy," owns one of the finest collections of blue Staffordshire china in the country, as well as a collection of old English pewter and copper.

Jackie's Teacher

Now that Tony Martin has joined the cast of "Ziegfeld Girl," Jackie Cooper spends on the set even the days he isn't before the camera. Jackie is an expert drummer, but Martin not only leads a band, but sings and is able to play any one of the orchestra instruments. He's promised to give young Cooper pointers in band-leading.

WARNER BROS. EARLE and on stage MELODY & MADNESS

Leonard Lyons:

New York, Jan. 29.

THE PRODUCERS of the "Cavalcade of America" radio series recently purchased a dramatization of the life of Emily Dickinsen. It was written by Norman Rosten, whose play, "First Stop to Heaven" had a Broadway premiere this season.

LYONS

After the cast had rehearsed the program thoroughly, the producers discovered that the eight Dickinsen poems quoted in the show were copyrighted—and that the copyrights belonged to an octogenarian niece of Emily Dickinsen. The venerable niece, now living in the South, refused to permit these poems to be broadcast. The frantic producers notified Rosten at his home in New Britain, Conn. "Don't worry," he assured them. "I'm taking the train to New York and everything will be all right" . . . During the train ride, of little more than an hour, Rosten—who won the Yale Poetry Award—composed eight poems in the style of Emily Dickinsen, which were used on that program without any one suspecting.

ABE LASTFOGEL, the William Morris Agency executive, attended a rehearsal of Toscanini conducting his orchestra . . . The enthralled agent, his head whirling with the memory of the music he had heard, floated to Lindy's. The first one who greeted him there was Abe Lyman . . . "Abe," was Lastfogel's greeting, "if I ever catch you waving a baton I'll break it over your head."

WASHINGTON'S New Dealers are urging the Senate Committee to subpena Douglas "Wrong Way" Corrigan as a witness to check Col. Lindbergh's testimony . . . Walter Wanger was expected to confer with the President about Hollywood's participation in national defense. Government checkups reveal that for propaganda purposes moving pictures are a better medium than radio—for people are more apt to remember what they see rather than what they hear . . . In the Department of Interior's broadcast of "One Nation Indivisible" many portions of "I Hear America Singing" were cut, because they were reminiscent of ASCAP melodies.

LOU AMBERS, the former lightweight champion, appeared on the Sports Quiz program with Caswell Adams and Arthur Mann . . . Ambers, who always has displayed limitless courage in the prize ring, was stricken with fear at the sight of the microphone, and didn't utter a single word throughout the entire broadcast. When it was over he smiled relievedly and extended his hand to Mel Allen, the interlocutor. "Shake, Mel," said Ambers. "What a thrill it was—listening to this program!"

RAYMOND MASSEY witnessed the President's swearing-in ceremony in Washington last week. "After hearing Roosevelt repeat the oath of office," he later confessed, "it makes me feel like a ham actor" . . . Bob Ritchie is determined to bring "H'ya Gentlemen" to Broadway. He's signing Ken Murray for the show and will switch Max Baer to another role . . . Constance Bennett and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, sr., are going to South America . . . Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review of Literature, was a flu victim last week and told his wife to have the doctor's prescription filled. The druggist requested further details and returned the "prescription"—which proved to be an old letter written in the illegible scrawl of Hendrik Willem Van Loon.

GEORGE JESSEL started a night club engagement in Boston on Wednesday. His wife, Lois Andrew, started working in a rival night club the day before. Jessel thought this would be a cute idea—until his employer compelled him to insert a clause in his contract precluding George from visiting his wife's club either socially or professionally . . . George just returned from Miami and reports that one of the new hotels there is offering sour-cream showers in every room . . Sunday night, in introducing Jimmy Walker at a dinner, Jessel said, "We've been together a long time, Jim and I. We've been as gay as city's sparrows, and just as poor."

IRA GERSHWIN, read the Times' music section on Sunday and found in the City Amateur Symphony Program the selections "Steppe, by Gretchaninoff" followed by "Floods of Spring, by Rachmaninoff." In the show-stopping Tchaikovsky number which Danny Kaye sings in "Lady in the Dark" Gershwin rhymed "Gretchaninoff" with "Rachmaninoff." After reading the Times' listing, Ira said: "It proves that reality sometimes takes a fancy to fancy."

THE NIGHT CLUB reviewer for Mademoiselle asked Harold Minsky, proprietor of the 51 Club, why he was voted the most popular student at Columbia, although he didn't play football or participate in politics. "My popularity was based on something stronger than football or politics," Minsky confessed. "It was burlesque passes."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 29 (INS).—The gossip that M-G-M were considering "Panama Hattie" became news today when the deal for the film rights was closed in New York. The price paid is in excess of $150,000, but when you consider the Cole Porter music and the success of the Buddy de Sylva play, that doesn't seem exorbitant. Arthur Freed, in whom Louis B. Mayer places such faith, will produce the movie version. He has already lined up Ann Sothern for the Ethel Merman role—the loudly dressed Panama gal, whose ideas are changed by a child. Ann can sing, too, having been taught by her mother, a vocal coach.

PARSONS

The child role, in which Joan Carroll was a sensation on the stage, will be given Shirley Temple.

Edward Small has returned to active producing with a pleasant little bankroll of $5,000,000 to be spent on United Artists Pictures. Always interesting news when we hear the tinkle of money in increased production, for it means more jobs for the actors. Eddie said today that he has lined up "Corsican Brothers," another Alexander Dumas thriller—and, of course, he would be happy if he could get Joan Bennett and Louis Hayward ("Son of Monte Cristo") for a return engagement; "My Official Wife" by Ernst Vadja; "Sabotage" and a series, of all things, "She Was a Working Girl." This one cries for Joan Blondell and negotiations are now on with her.

That independent movie, "Forgotten Village," which John Steinbeck and Herb Kline made in Mexico, has both M-G-M and Twentieth Century-Fox bidding for it. It shows the progress of modern science, particularly medicine, and is more or less factual. Darryl Zanuck says after "Grapes of Wrath" he would release the picture without even seeing it.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Jeffrey Lynn and Margaret Hayes, formerly Dana Dale, have set the day; John Garfield's wife has had her nose bobbed and is now confiding to friends she would like to be an actress; Martha Scott has been very sick with the flu; also her bridegroom, Carleton Alsop. James Whale is shooting around Martha in "They Dare Not Love"; Franchot Tone was devotion itself to pretty Cobina Wright, jr., at the Rex St. Cyr party at Ciro's and you cannot blame him. She looked so pretty.

As soon as "The Bride Came C.O.D." is completed, Bill Cagney, Jimmie's manager, will go into the hospital for an appendectomy; Constance Worth and Jeff Steele, to whom Margaret Roach is not engaged, tete-a-tete at the Scheherazade; Commander Arthur Jarrett, of the Royal Navy, gets in Hollywood tomorrow on a special mission for the ministry of investigation. His first hosts are Darryl Zanuck and Bill Goetz at the Studio Cafe; Jerome Kern, Harry Ruby and Buddy de Sylva, three of our top composers, celebrating their same birthdays at the Mocambo; Dixie Crosby, Bing's wife, the twins and the baby have gone to Sun Valley.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Pepco Would Cut Average Residential Rate 4.3 Cents

A reduction of 43 cents in the average monthly bill of residential electric consumers was offered yesterday by the Potomac Electric Power Co. in apportioning a $338,000 slash ordered last week by the Public Utilities Commission.

The new rate schedules, if adopted this week by the commission, will appear in the February bills.

The total, which was found available by the commission for rate reducing purposes, would be split into $81,855 for consumers under the Residential A classification; $236,193 for consumers of the Commercial E schedule; $4,180 for Commercial L; $5,591 for reduction of the Suburban E and Rural E schedules; $3,065 for the Maryland Light & Power Co. contract rate, and $7,344 for suburban Schedule A and rural Schedule A.

New Rates Ordered

Each year the commission holds a public hearing to determine the amount of net profits which goes back to the consumers under a sliding scale arrangement. Half of the net earnings above 6 per cent of the total company investment, is returned to the consumer in rate reductions. As soon as the commission set the $338,000 figure, it requested the company to submit a new rate schedule to reflect the reduction, and to give back to the residential and commercial consumer savings in proportion to the total current used last year.

On this basis the company gave the residential user 26.4 per cent of the total reduction and the remainder to the commercial users.

Under the proposed schedule for residential consumers, savings begin after the first 38 kilowatt hours are used. About 27,000 residential customers never use this much power, so they will not share in the reduced bills. However, some 125,000 customers will benefit and the larger the amount of electricity they use the more the reduction in the monthly bill will be.

There are 28,505 commercial consumers in the District and all but 4,600 would benefit in the proposed rates.

Rates Listed

The proposed residential A rate would be 3.90 cents per kilowatt hours for the first 38 kilowatt hours; 1.75 cents each for the next 92 k. w. h. and 1.50 cents per k. w. h. for all over 130 k. w. h. The only change over the present charge is that the initial charge of 3.90 cents is for the first 40 kilowatt hours. In other words, as soon as the consumer uses 38 k. w. h. he begins to receive the benefit of the reduced charge for the second block.

The proposed commercial schedule L is: For the first 50,000 kilowatt hours, 0.95 cents each; next 140,000 k. w. h., 0.60 cents each, and for all over 190,000 k. w. h., 0.50 each. The present rate is 1.10 cents each for the first 15,000 k. w. h.; 0.90 cents next 35,000; 0.50 cents next 140,000, and 0.50 cents all over 190,000 k. w. h.

The proposed commercial schedule E follows: First 60 kilowatt hours at 3.8 cents each k. w. h.; next 220 at 2.2 cents each; next 1,720 k. h. w. at 2.0 cents; next 45,000 at 1.1 cents each; next 155,000 at 0.7 cents each k. w. h. and all over 205,000 k. w. h. at 0.6 cents each k. w. h.

The present E rates are 3.8 cents for each k. h. w. in the first block of 70 k. w. h.; 2.2 cents for the next 380 k. w. h.; 2.0 cents for the next 1,550; 1.2 cents for the next 23,000 k. w. h.; 1.1 cents for the next 25,000 k. w. h.; 0.7 cents for the next 150,000 k. h. w., and al lover 200,000 k. w. h. at 0.6 cents each.

Bridgeport, Conn., Jan. 29 (INS).—Both sides completed testimony this afternoon in the trial of Joseph Spell, 32-year-old chauffeur-butler, who is charged with criminally assaulting his former employer, Mrs. Eleanor P. Strubing. It is expected that the case will go to the jury Friday.

Arguments of prosecution and defense counsel will be presented tomorrow, and Judge Carl Foster will charge the jury Friday morning.

Gen. Metaxas

Had the death of Gen. John Metaxas occurred three months earlier it might have altered the history of many decades. That is a sufficient testimony to his greatness. As it is, he may be remembered as the man who saved the day for Europe by the sheer power of his will.

When the Italian legions entered Greece on October 28, there were very few who believed that resistance, however valorous, would be anything but vain. Nothing, it then seemed, could prevent Mussolini from gaining control of the shores of the Aegean and eastern Mediterranean. And had this assumption been correct, the war in Africa might also have been another story.

Perhaps even in Greece there were those who thought passive submission to Italian occupation and domination preferable to wholesale destruction. It was, however, for Metaxas to decide whether Greece would yield or fight, and Metaxas never hesitated. So wholly had the will of this short, plump unimpressive-looking man become the will of the Greek nation and people, that when he called for war to the death against the "brazen invader" he was answered with a zeal and heroism that filled the free world with admiration and astonishment. For within less than three weeks the Italians were falling back in defeat and utter confusion. Within less than three months they had been brought close to the brink of ruin, and Mussolini's dream of a new Roman Empire had been destroyed.

This rapid succession of Greek victories against an adversary so much stronger in numbers, arms and equipment has never been fully explained. Perhaps it cannot be explained in purely material terms. It may well have been that Metaxas understood the quality of his own army and the weakness of his enemy much better than these things were understood by the rest of the world. British assistance to the Greeks, especially in the way of staff work, is probably much greater than has yet been disclosed. But something more than this is needed to account for what the tiny Greek army accomplished in Epirus and Albania—and this additional and essential factor is that will to freedom personified in little John Metaxas.

Nor is this will to freedom at all incongruous with the fact that Metaxas was undeniably a dictator. The danger of a dictatorship is that if the dictator chooses to lead his people to ruin, as in the case of Mussolini, or to crush them to slavery and starvation, as in the case of Stalin, there is none to prevent him. But there also are occasions when a dictator, if his wisdom and patriotism are equal to his power, can save his country. So it was with Richelieu, with Pilsudski, with Mustapha Kemal. And so it was with Metaxas. And in saving Greece, Metaxas, like Themistocles before him, has unquestionably helped to save the Western world.

The Silent Horn

To judge by queries received by American news agencies from their offices in London, what the British people are most interested in knowing about the doings of their new Ambassador to Washington is whether or not Lord Halifax has made any plans for fox hunting. This curiosity in a people having so much else to preoccupy them seemed at first a little extraordinary. But it appears that fox hunting is now quite extinct in England, which would seem to leave the United States about the only place in the world where it survives in its traditional form. Maybe there was a little nostalgia in the query.

But then the end of the fox hunting tradition was in sight even before England went to war. It had entered upon a long period of decline. This was due in part to the impoverishment of the "county families." But principally it was the result of the break-up of the great estates, which, for nearly four centuries, had dominated English rural life. Fox hunting flourished and declined with the rise and decline of the landed gentry. Oddly enough, though, there was a time when an even older aristocracy had looked down their noses at fox hunting. Either they disliked the "new men" who were addicted to it, or they considered it a rather sissified substitute for the stag hunt. This seems to have been the case even in Shakespeare's day, when the enclosure of the common lands had already begun and when poaching was already a pretty terrible crime. But by Dryden's time, hunting had "an idea of quality joined to it and it has become the most important business in the life of a gentleman." The eighteenth century just before the industrial revolution—the age of Squire Western—was perhaps its heyday.

Thus the fox hunt is the symbol of the England which rose on the ashes of Merrie England—of the England that some say was dead at Bosworth Field. And though, as the song goes, "There'll always be an England," it is likely to be a very different England from the Old England of Squire Western and of "John Peel with his coat so gay."

Buying Time

There is a Latin proverb which runs something like this: He who gives now, gives manyfold. It should shine out with words of fire from the walls inclosing the legislators who have the lend-lease bill under discussion. Here we are on the eve of an attempt literally to blast into oblivion the nation which stands between our nation and chaos. Another deadly blow, and we shall be left alone, "the last that dare to struggle with the foe." At the very least we ought, as Mr. Stimson said, to "buy the time" with our resources.

In this light the American people will read Mr. Morgenthau's summary of Britain's financial position. Mr. Morgenthau first testified that Great Britain had $1,775,000,000 of dollar exchange assets available to pay for defense orders. (The British Treasury, as the Secretary subsequently explained, has since revised this figure slightly upward, placing the total at $1,811,000,000). The items were: gold holdings, $292,000,000; marketable American securities, $616,000,000; direct and miscellaneous investment, $900,000,000; official balances, $54,000,000. An item of $305,000,000 in private balances was excluded from consideration as necessary for the conduct of private business.

This statement sounded strange when read in the light of previous Federal Reserve figures. At the end of August, 1939, Britain's gold and dollar resources were stated by the Federal Reserve as follows: $2,000,000,000 in gold, $595,000,000 in dollar balances, $1,080,000,000 in American securities and $1,185,000,000 in direct and miscellaneous investments. This gave a total of $4,860,000,000. The wide gap between Treasury and Federal Reserve estimates meant either that the Reserve Board had greatly overestimated British buying capacity or else that the interim drain on British resources had been terrific. The latter assumption turns out to be correct. For one thing, Britain, as Mr. Morgenthau showed, took over France's orders after the French collapse. However, the British Treasury has furnished information in regard to gold and dollar assets held at the outbreak of war which corresponds closely with Reserve Board estimates.

So the British have $1,811,000,000 to spend. But, according to Mr. Morgenthau, they have already pledged $1,400,000,000 of that amount on old munitions orders in America; so that they have only about $400,000,000 left in the barrel. This is being spent currently for nonmilitary, but equally defensive, purposes in the United States. Thus the British now find themselves stymied. They have handed in what one might call their new "victory schedule"—the vast order which Mr. Purvis brought back from Britain for long-run purchases. And it is gathering dust—gathering dust while we talk, while Britain girds itself for the coming shock, while Hitler prepares.

Proof of the holdup was given by Mr. Morgenthau in a report of a conversation with Mr. Knudsen. "Only yesterday afternoon," said Mr. Morgenthau, "Mr. Knudsen telephoned me to ask whether there isn't some way we can clear British orders for 2,000 planes, so that available capacity will not stand idle." Idle capacity on the eve of Armageddon! Aside from the effect upon the British, what of the effect upon our own armament, imperiled while we look between the very stitches of the British sock. Another example of the harm to our own defense in this holdup of British orders was given in the case of Studebaker and Buick. These concerns are contracted to turn out airplane engines on a joint British-War Department order, but the firms can't let the subcontracts till they have an assurance of British financing. It would seem as if we are insuring another nine-day round of indignation from a future Knudsen confession of the lag between pledge and performance.

It is incredible to think that when there is at stake all that the British have and are, the British are misleading us on some of their resources. Mr. Morgenthau had the mortification of having to acquit them of dishonesty. To be sure, they have jute mills in Bombay, tea plantations in Ceylon, rubber estates in Malaya, Brazilian bonds, pearls on the necks of their women folk. These are assets beyond question. But how they can be mobilized into dollars which would be a go signal in Detroit is another question. No doubt some properties will come into our possession, for reasons connected with the next world order as well as our own interests, by way of "equivalent" repayment for our munitions. But this isn't an immediate problem while the enemy is at the gate and our industrial capacity stays idle. He who gives now, gives manyfold.

Out Of The West

That distance doesn't necessarily mean complacency with the storm-racked world that washes the Atlantic is shown in a resolution from Oklahoma. It comes from the State Senate, and for a succinct rationale of why the war in Europe is distinctly our business, the resolution would be hard to beat. Here it is:

Whereas the British Empire, whence came the Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, the King James version of the Holy Bible, and in which nation the seeds of democracy were sown, nurtured, and brought to full fruition, and which nation has long since been a free people, with a free government serving as a bulwark to the free peoples of the earth; and

Whereas the British Empire at this time is engaged in a death struggle to maintain not only its freedom but its very life and existence against barbarism and tyranny, which would throw in reverse all the progress of mankind; and

Whereas the United States of America and other free nations are the legitimate offspring and children of this free state of existence, and because of this relationship we as a nation are likewise threatened with a similar death warrant; and

Whereas the President of the United States has addressed the Congress of the United States of America on the state of the Union and has made recommendations as to the necessary steps to preserve the Nation and to lend all possible aid to Great Britain, Greece, China, and every free nation everywhere withstanding attacks from aggressor nations by supplying tanks, airplanes, ships, and other munitions of war to the fullest possible extent and with all possible haste: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the State Senate of the State of Oklahoma, that the Congress of the United States be memorialized and urged to support President Roosevelt in his program for safety and security of this Nation and aid to other democracies; that the Congress be urged to provide for the delivery of all possible airplanes, tanks, and other munitions of war without delay; and that this body denounce as unsound any program of appeasement or collaboration with dictators and dictatorship; that we here and now affirm our faith in democracy and all its institutions, and urge upon our Members in Congress the stand of the President in his program for the preservation of democracy in the Western Hemisphere and throughout the world.

Ciano To The Wars

Count Galeazzo Ciano is a young man whom, in the past, Benito Mussolini has delighted to honor. A lieutenant colonel in the Royal Italian Air Force and the husband of the Duce's favorite child, Edda, he has for five years been Italy's foreign minister. In the latter capacity he has represented the Fascist regime in many important dealings with Hitler's Reich and signed a succession of agreements whereby Italy's fate was increasingly linked with that of Germany. The important position which Ciano has occupied in the Fascist hierarchy can be gauged by the fact that more than any other individual in Mussolini's immediate entourage has he been regarded as the latter's probable successor.

In view of all this, the fact that he has now been sent to the war zone by the Duce cannot be viewed as merely a routine matter. On the contrary, the move is described by Herbert L. Matthews in a dispatch from Rome as "the greatest political development of the war." Has Ciano lost favor with his father-in-law? That is possible. There have been rumors that Ciano's once fervent pro-Nazi sentiments have burned very low of late. It is also rumored that he spoke up in favor of Italy's venture in Greece in the hope that through a victory Italy's bargaining power vis-a-vis the Reich would be enhanced by proving that the kingdom was capable of making a material contribution to the Axis cause. Whether these rumors are true or not, the fact is apparent that Italy's Greek venture has met with disaster, that Italy can only be saved from destruction by German aid, and that, in such a pass, the habit of tyrants always has been to visit their chagrin upon underlings.

"Britain, Ahoy!"

With due apologies, may I suggest addenda to the editorial "Britain, Ahoy!" We didn't have to wait until Manila Bay for Josiah Tattnall's "Blood is thicker than water" aphorism to bear fruit. When a British merchantship captain saved the survivors of "the Virginius massacre" in a Cuban port, and defied the authorities, he used the same phrase. And when a German cruiser prepared to shell the Samoan village in the late '80's, the British fleet commander ranged his craft beside the Trenton, and other ships, implementing the phrase.

Germany's effort to persuade the continental powers to gang up on the United States in 1898 was met by the statement from 10 Downing Street, "This would be considered an unfriendly act."

Liked Cartoon

Seldom has a cartoon exposed a stupid situation as effectively as Elderman's in The Post, showing Uncle Sam at the seashore bawling through a Wheeler-Nye megaphone "What's Your War Aims?" at Churchill and Hitler as they bang at each other.

Apologists for isolationists are always harping on their "sincerity," as if that excused all. Sincerity we grant—but in whose cause? That is the real and only question.

Proposed "Bottleneck"

The picture page in The Post this morning showed beautifully how the newly proposed plan for the building of an annex to the Pan-American Building would create a bottleneck for traffic on Virginia Avenue.

As a lifelong citizen of Washington I consider it a tremendous disgrace that because the original site for the annex would ruin Mr. Ickes' view from his office window, we Washingtonians must have another traffic burden to shoulder. Why should such a selfish desire be tolerated when it will cause so much trouble?

Peace Aims

At Lord Halifax's first press conference yesterday, which I attended, one thing struck me as significant. When questioned about Britain's war aims, he replied: "At the moment our first aim is to win the war. But our peace aim is to so construct Europe, afterwards, that there will not be another war."

None of the papers picked up that phrase "peace aim"—yet to me it is the first hopeful sound in a vocabulary peppered with "blitzkrieg," "all out attack," "total defense," etc. It carries with it the heartening suggestion that peace will come again to this troubled world—and that even in chaos the British people are bravely looking ahead and planning for it.

Perhaps if all the nations began now to think in terms of peace aims instead of war aims, they would be ready to meet it more justly when it comes. Certainly here in America it would help us to clarify our own position if we knew them. So never mind your war aims, World. What are your peace aims? That's what we want to know.

Differing Opinions On The Lend-Lease Bill

I would like to comment on the testimony given against the lend-lease bill before the House Foreign Affairs Committee by Kennedy, Lindbergh, Norman Thomas, Hugh Johnson and other witnesses. Most of them and their supporters may be admirable persons and sincere, but I would not trust their judgment on this particular question, and believe that if they had the power to lead this country, they would not do as well as President Roosevelt, his advisers and supporters, the American people that have chosen him, and people of other countries who trust him and pray for his success.

Reality and fantasy must be analyzed with factual evidence and common sense to reach a comprehensible understanding. As a modest illustration, I wish to make the following remarks: I have been a member of the Socialist Party for the last 30 years, always belonging to the right wing. I have been a member of a labor union for the last 40 years and have supported, in principles and tactics, the achievements of political and economic democracy in lawful and peaceful process. I have never carried any weapons, and for years I have had the same views as many others in this and other countries of being opposed to armament. But now I must be in favor of it for national defense—for international defense of democracy, oppression and aggression by the dictators of today.

I am in accord with the Socialist groups of New York and other places that have protested the position taken by Norman Thomas, as a Socialist, at the present time, as do the majority of the Socialists or Socialist Democrats of all the world. Socialist labor and the people of the world are not for appeasement policies toward dictators that have brought the world to its present ruin and savage situation.

At the present time there is nothing else to do but cooperate with the President in his policy of national defense, in his project of the lend-lease bill, and in his declaration of intention to carry on a fight for the success of his ideals, his program for successful defense and the programs for the establishment of a better international social order which will advance liberty, justice, democracy, peace and economic security for as many people as possible in the world. All of these things can be accomplished if there is unity and faith in the American way of life and ideals and a trust in our President who is able to achieve a new glory for America and civilization.

IGNATIUS GERACI.

Washington, Jan. 26.

The United States is so scared of the big bad wolf outside the door that it is overlooking the bear under the bed. While the American people rant at Hitler, cheer for the Stars and Stripes, and yell for the democratic way of life, they proceed to elect a President for a dangerous third term and then hardly bat an eye when his first piece of legislation is to ask for unprecedented dictatorial powers in the lend-lease bill. Hitler must be well pleased at the way we are coming around to his philosophy of government.

Congress denounces dictatorships, prepares to save democracy, and then proceeds to give away most of its democratic rights and powers to one man. If this be consistency, I fail to understand the meaning of the word. If the lend-lease bill is passed without amendment, it proves this Nation's lack of faith in the democratic system to cope with modern dangers and problems. In short, Uncle Sam will be crawling under the bed beside the bear to hide from the howling wolf at the door.

I for one am not convinced that it is as yet necessary for our Congressmen to weaken their own powers in order to build up American defense and aid the British, as they will be doing if they enact the present lend-lease bill into law. Let's look to our liberties in Washington, as well as abroad, and if we of draft age must eventually be sent overseas to die for the "cause," as we shall be if and when this country goes to war, at least give us the satisfaction of knowing that we are making the supreme sacrifice for a democracy back home and not for just an American-flavored dictatorship. There is already enough discussion about how we shall defend America, but too little thought about "what" we shall be defending—a democracy or a New Deal Reich.

WILSON ROCKWELL.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 25.

The lend-lease bill is primarily a bill to give President Roosevelt more power. "Aid to Britain" is merely intended to justify it. Of all the new powers which would be granted to the President, has anybody heard of one thing that the President intends to do that would not get us into war? Knowing that the American public would not stand for a declaration of war under the present circumstances, the sponsors of this bill wish to give Mr. Roosevelt the power to force Germany to commit an act of war.

If Nazi planes bombed British warships being repaired in our ports, the Congress would immediately declare war and give the President still broader powers, so that he could silence his critics. Of course, this would make a few people very happy, but most of the people would not like it, for we would be living in a full-fledged dictatorship.

ARTHUR K. NOORIS.

Washington, Jan. 27.

In expressing his whole-hearted approval, Senator George suggested three amendments: A time limit to the Presidential power; an agreement for periodic reports by the President to Congress, and a clause making it clear that the United States Navy would not go on convoy duty." The two first mentioned amendments seem entirely in keeping both with our democratic principle and with accomplishment of the vitally urgent business for which the bill was designed. The proposed ruling, however, that our Navy shall never go on convoy duty might well jeopardize the whole intent and efficiency of the aid-to-Britain bill. So to tie the hands of the Commander in Chief of our Navy in an emergency which clearly concerns use and command of the sea is not consistent with our international emergency today, any more than it is in keeping with the spirit of the framers of our Constitution, who recognized the fact that, with all our system of checks and balances, there must yet be available under our Constitution supreme power for the Executive in times of emergency.

The Women's League of Voters, in its approval of the lend-lease bill, saw it as "not leading to war, but a substitute for war." And in this same light Senator George and the greater number of thinking Americans also view it. Yet if we would have it actually prove the substitute for war which undoubtedly the President also intended it to be, we must surely have in the bill, and its administration, something of that iron hand and discipline which is essential to the Commander in Chief of a war effort.

Exactly the aid which it will be necessary to extend in order to keep the British Navy on the seas, in fighting trim, and free for first-line duty, it is impossible to foresee; it might well be that the use of American convoyed supply ships would be essential to this all-important end. The fortunes of war move swiftly, with lightning rapidity in these days, and the President must be free to do likewise in his administration of our substitute for war measure, if we are to help turn the tide of war from our shores.

The Post Impressionist

The Mould Of Form

WHEN I LEFT Washington and came to Arkansas two years ago, I was a puny, mouse-like creature, weighing a scant 140 pounds, and dressing always in a quiet, mouse-grey suit with a quiet, mouse-white shirt and a quiet, mouse-blue tie. I said "Please" and "Thank you" to everyone.

After two years of country ham, corn-on-the-cob, fried chicken, rice and red-eye gravy, biscuits and sorghum molasses, sweet potatoes and marshmallows, and similar delicacies, coupled with vigorous outdoor exercise and horseback riding, I tip the scales at 185, and I am, if I do say so, as I oughtn't to, a fine figure of a man. I am scarcely civil to anyone weighing less than 200.

Largely for reasons of economy, I have continued to wear my mouse-like outfit, although it is bursting at every seam, hoping that some day I could wear it all out and replace it by something more in harmony with my new physical resplendence. The opportunity came while I was enjoying my vacation in Tucson this month. I arrived in that Western paradise neatly but quietly clad in my mouse-grey suit, to find myself stared at as we here in Arkansas would stare at an Indian wrapped in his blanket.

The men of Tucson, splendid-looking creatures, all of them, wear almost everything that a man can wear, except a quiet, mouse-grey suit. They wear big white hats and cowboy boots; they wear shirts of rainbow hues and neckerchiefs like a sunset on the desert; they wear slacks of every conceivable color, with rich maroon shirts or jackets of a dazzling check or stripe; they wear blue denim cow pants; they wear magenta silk bands around their heads. To top it all off, a movie troupe from Hollywood was in town, filming "Billy the Kid" at the Double U Ranch. If any more color could have been added to the spectrum, they would have added it.

So I sat at the bar of the Santa Rita Hotel, as conspicuous in my mouse-grey suit as an elephant in a herd of white-faced cattle. I sipped a concoction known as a skull-buster, which jars the teeth loose from the gums, and gazed with envy at the rainbow-hued mob milling about me. After my second skull-buster, I pushed my teeth back into their sockets as best I could and went to the nearest clothing store.

I found exactly what I wanted. It was a tweed with a background of lovely sand color. Splattered over the background at random were great luscious blobs of vermilion, aquamarine, viridian, mulberry, lemon yellow, orange, and burnt umber. To go with this creation, I bought some maroon shirts and a dozen ties woven by an Indian who had evidently had three or four skull-busters before he sat down to his loom.

My figure is now so symmetrical that a size 41 ready-made suit is almost a perfect fit, so the few necessary alterations were accomplished that afternoon. The very same evening I returned to the bar of the Santa Rita, immensely pleased with myself and with the fine figure I was cutting. After a couple of skull-busters, I felt as happy and as proud of myself as a chameleon who has successfully adapted himself to a plaid background. I fitted right into the picture. If it were not generally known that Robert Taylor was in bed with a cold, I am sure I should have been taken for that gentleman.

When I returned to Arkansas, the effect of the skull-busters more or less worn off, I was a bit dubious about my new outfit, but I gathered fresh courage from an editorial in The Post, "The Mould of Form," commenting favorably upon the latest fashion trend of introducing more and brighter color into the masculine wardrobe. Surely I was right in the swim. I decided to give a dinner party to show off my new suit.

I had told Cup-cake in advance that I was going to wear a perfectly stunning new outfit. At the dinner-table, Cup-cake, seated at my right, exclaimed in a loud voice, "Why, Butch, what a gorgeous suit you're wearing! It's too lovely for words!"

The other guests kept their eyes carefully averted from their host and ostentatiously continued their discussion as to when one is justified in calling a flight of stairs a companionway.

Cup-cake repeated, still more loudly, "Too lovely for words, darling! It's the handsomest suit I've seen for many a day. Where did you get it?"

The others were even more engrossed in their argument.

Cup-cake appealed to Fuzzy. "Fuzzy, don't you think Butch looks simply grand in his new suit?"

Fuzzy, with his eyes still averted, replied, "Oh, yes, indeed."

Cup-cake and I exchange pitying smiles. After all, we know what is what in masculine fashions.

Later in the course of the dinner, I asked Cup-cake to pass me the Philadelphia cream cheese.

"Which is that" she asked.

"The white cheese on the green plate," I told her.

Cup-cake handed me the Swiss cheese, which was on a blue plate.

Fuzzy had been watching all this with a malicious gleam in his eyes (he had on a grey suit, and he had no suntan), and at Cup-cake's mistake he roared with venomous laughter.

"Butch, you fool, don't you know that Cup-cake is completely color-blind? She can't tell green from red or blue."

Perhaps I'd better go back to Tucson. Or perhaps I should have served a round of skull-busters to my guests. JOHN T. APPLEBY.

Lindbergh Doctrine Of U. S. Defense

ALTHOUGH Colonel Lindbergh's opinions and conclusions have had wide notice, very little attention has been paid to the reasoning which sustains his views on American defense. Yet his reasoning is important. For Colonel Lindbergh is the only serious critic of the policy of aiding Britain who faces the issue squarely: the only one who has explained why and how he believes the western hemisphere can be defended successfully by the United States alone. His considered views on this crucial question are set forth in the prepared statement which he submitted to the House committee.

He bases his belief, he tells us, on two facts: first, that an invading army and its supplies cannot come by air, but "must still be transported by sea," and second, that with 10,000 thoroughly modern fighting planes and essential bases from Newfoundland and Alaska to South America, aviation would make "it more difficult than ever for a navy to approach a hostile shore." Colonel Lindbergh's task was to answer the Secretary of the Navy who had pointed out that the American fleet would be greatly inferior to the combined navies of the Triple Axis, once the British and French fleets were lost. The Colonel's answer is that even with an inferior fleet, the width of the ocean favors the American defense: add an air force to the defense, and there is not "any danger of an invasion of this continent."

THE ESSENCE of the Lindbergh doctrine is that a hemisphere can be defended against overseas attack from any combination of powers by means of an inferior navy provided there is an airforce with essential bases. The Colonel insists that—for the defensive—the oceans, even with an inferior fleet, can by means of a reasonable airforce be made impregnable. Everything else that the Colonel had to say depends upon the truth or error of this, his basic argument.

THE ARGUMENT, when it is examined, turns out to be an extraordinary example of false reasoning. For note that he tells us the airforce (which is to make up for naval inferiority) can defend the hemisphere "provided we establish the bases essential for defense," and these essential bases must be established, observe carefully, "in parts of South America."

Now how does one go from the United States to these essential South American bases in order to supply them and fortify them and operate them? The Colonel himself, though in another connection, explains how little in the way of supplies can be transported by air. Now there are no overland connections, no railroads or motor highways, from the United States to the South American continent on which we must have, he says, these "essential" bases. These essential bases can be supplied, therefore, only by sea—in time of war by transports convoyed by the navy, but if we do not have undisputed command of the seas, how do we hold and supply and operate the South American bases which the Colonel relies upon to protect this hemisphere even after we have lost command of the seas?

The Colonel is reasoning in a circle. To prove that we need not fear an Axis control of the seas against our inferior navy, he tells us that air power will make up the deficiency. But he tells us also that this air power must have essential bases overseas in South America. Yet these overseas bases cannot be held unless we have command of the seas. In his attempt to argue that air power can make up for lack of sea power, Colonel Lindbergh proves the opposite: that without sea power it is impossible to have the essential bases for air power.

On this error his whole case breaks down: for if command of the seas is necessary to hold the bases for air power, then the collapse of British sea power cannot be a matter of indifference to the United States. When Colonel Lindbergh has explained how he expects to hold his essential air bases overseas in South America, he will be entitled to say that he does not care what happens to the British fleet.

IT IS QUITE evident from Colonel Lindbergh's testimony that he does not realize the role of sea power in the history of the western hemisphere or even in the actual conduct of the present war. Thus he is able to see that even the German airforce could not strike at England until the German army had occupied nearby bases on the European coast. This fact reassures him. But he is too quickly reassured. For if he looked at another theatre of war, he would see that British sea power has carried the Royal Air Force to bases from which it dominates Northern Africa and the Eastern Mediterranean. Despite the German and Italian navies and airforces, the British navy has planted British air power in a region which is further by air and much further by sea from the British Isles than is South America from Europe.

If Britain, fighting for her life, and fighting alone, can do what she has done in the Eastern Mediterranean, what could the German airforce do if Hitler were the undisputed master of Europe and on the sea supreme, with his Japanese ally, with his Italian ally, with all the ships and shipyards of Britain, France and Europe? If Britain can control the seas and dominate the air thousands of miles from London, just how would the one-ocean navy of the United States hold those South American air bases which the Colonel tells us are "essential."

THE FACT of the matter is that the Colonel, who talks as if he had never studied sea power, is under the simple illusion that oceans are a defensive barrier. They are not now and they never have been either in the western hemisphere or anywhere else. The western hemisphere has often been threatened with invasion and several times invaded. Napoleon Bonaparte threatened invasion in 1802, going so far as to assemble an expeditionary force; he did not carry out the threat because the "negotiated" Peace of Amiens did not last and the European war was renewed. In 1812 we were at war with England and were invaded. In 1822 a European alliance threatened to invade and reconquer Latin-America; the project was abandoned because Britain and the United States were in joint and parallel opposition. In 1859, when Britain was temporarily not on our side and the Civil War was impending, Napoleon III landed a French army in Mexico and placed his creature, Maximilian, on the throne. In 1898 the feeble Spanish fleet crossed the Atlantic, caused a panic along our coast, and entered the Caribbean Sea before our Navy caught up with it.

The ocean is wide but far from its being a barrier to sea power, it is the highway of sea power. Thus the western hemisphere, since our own independence, has been invaded when, as in 1812, British sea power was against us, and when, as in 1859, the British were not on our side and we were preoccupied elsewhere. On the other hand, when Britain and America have stood together—as against Napoleon I, as against the Holy Alliance, as in effect in 1898 when the Kaiser itched to help Spain and was restrained by the British—the threats against this hemisphere have been vain.

What this history proves is that the defense of the western hemisphere depends not upon the width of the seas, nor upon the seas plus airplanes, but upon sea power which commands the seas. And no one will ever understand how the United States has been defended in the past or how it is to be defended in the future if he does not grasp fully the fundamental importance of sea power.

Just A Sweet Graft

I AM GOING to tell you some more about the union racket which is shaking down the poor pick-and-shovel stiffs in the great national effort to spread freedom everywhere, on which President Roosevelt vowed that nobody would be allowed to profiteer. The pick-and-shovel shakedown is the hod-carriers' and common laborers' union, and it is the sweetest graft of all, because the boys just go along quietly and mysteriously, never holding elections or conventions but always collecting the money, and whenever you try to get in touch with them they are away. It is like trying to nail a plank on a cloud of smoke to investigate the hod-carriers' and common laborers' racket. You know it is there, but when you try to touch it, it ain't.

This union now claims 250,000 members. That much I did get from the woman who answered the phone in Washington, where the headquarters were established last April after many years in Quincy, Mass.

JOE MORESCHI, the boss, or international president, explained to the local Chamber of Commerce in Quincy that he was moving the business to Washington to be closer to the public pulse—obviously a misprint for "purse," inasmuch as his boys have been extorting from $25 to $50 per head from American citizens desiring to turn a few spades of soil in the building of cantonments, powder plants and the like.

The boss, however, is not in Washington, and neither is the secretary, Achilles Persio. They are out of town, and will be gone for a month.

Guess where they are. Out in the snow heartening their loyal followers as they chip the frozen soil with picks to earn a few eating bucks for their families? You know better than that! Mr. Moreschi and Mr. Persion are down in Miami, the hibernating place of the criminal scum and the racketeers of the A. F. of L., to confer with themselves on solemn affairs of labor with a capital L, in a series of deliberations which will include an accredited representative of the Chicago underworld.

YOU WOULD THINK that a big international union of the A. F. of L. would leave some imprint, if only a scar, on a city the size of Quincy after 20-odd years of official residence there. The teamsters and carpenters are pretty important in Indianapolis, for instance. But in Quincy, Mass., the pick-and-shovel racket was very aloof. Mr. Moreschi was generally "out" or "away," and the local people know little about him or his union, except that the union did build a three-story edifice for its headquarters.

He became president after the death of Dominick D'Allesandro in 1926, and "became president," is about as good a term as can be used to describe the process. The rank and file were not consulted, nor has their opinion been asked on any question since the last convention in 1911. Moreschi "became president" and president he remains, and nowadays, according to the claim of his own office in Washington, his central treasury draws tribute from 250,000 American workmen—some of them willing suckers, of course, but others victims of plain extortion.

AT THE RATE of 35 cents a month per member, which was the same graft that was extorted from the building service workers by George Scalise, that would yield $1,050,000 a year to the international treasury, and we don't know how many years this graft has been rolling in or what has been done with any of it beyond paying the salaries of about 20 office hands at headquarters and a miserable little death benefit ranging from $50 to $200.

This union is so rotten that even the gorillas of the movie employes' racket may look with envy and admiration on the larcenous effrontery of the racketeers who run both the international and the dirty little shakedown locals which carry the message of organized labor down to the pick-and-shovel stiffs. But the other A. F. of L. construction unions, which collaborate with it and give it aid and comfort by their standing agreements to strike jobs struck by the common laborers, are only a little less guilty.

Baering Down On the News

One horror of war is the officer who wears spurs on the dance floor and hamstrings everybody for miles around.

A fellow doing the conga with spurs on his heels can do more damage than a fighting rooster. It is worse than being chased through a cactus patch in your bare feet.

I notice that this man's army has eliminated the click. You produced the click by snapping your heels together smartly while standing at attention with your right hand touching your hat. If you could do all that at the same time without falling on your face you were eligible for promotion with your next court-martial.

I see they run off the bugle call on a phonograph record and peel potatoes by machinery in the army these days. One more labor saving invention like that and a soldier will be overpaid at $30 a month.

SPEAKER RAYBURN

Messrs. Alsop and Kintner give him the major credit for the return of "sweet reasonableness" to the White House

Capital Parade

By Joseph Alsop And Robert Kintner

New White House Technique

THERE WAS very real long-term significance, only imperfectly disclosed in the news dispatches, in the President's Monday night meeting with the Democratic and Republican Congressional leaders. When the President gathered the leaders at the White House fireside for after-dinner discussion of amendments to the lease-lend bill, he broke sharply with his own past. Furthermore, the break was intentional, was made at the express request of Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, and portends similar gestures of sweet reasonableness in the future.

In the past, as everyone knows, the Presidential manner toward Congress has been more imperious than sweetly reasonable. As the war crisis has developed, to be sure, he has tended more and more to consult rather than command. But the consultations have commonly taken place only when he felt he was in a tight spot, as he did, for example, in July, 1939, when he held the famous and fruitless bipartisan conference of Senate chieftains to try to obtain prompt Senate repeal of the arms embargo.

NOW, urged on by men like Rayburn, Senator Walter F. George and Senator James F. Byrnes, the President is consciously restoring what used to be regarded as the normal legislative-executive relationship. As every moderately able President has always done, he still reserves to himself the task of initiating broad policies. But when it comes to writing his policies into law, he is also beginning to consult and confer, to take advice and to mull over proposed compromises. In short, he is beginning to allow Congress to perform its proper function of presenting policies in the way most acceptable to the largest number of people. He might have saved himself much trouble by doing so before.

The episode of the Monday night meeting was a striking case in point. After the introduction of the lease-lend bill, Speaker Rayburn canvassed the House for reactions. He found widespread demand for four types of change: (1) a two-year time limit; (2) a specific anticonvoy provision; (3) a provision calling on the President to make trimonthly reports to Congress on his use of the powers granted in the bill, and (4) a provision requiring Army and Navy participation in all decisions to release war materials to other powers. Senator George, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee in charge of the bill in the Senate, discovered the same reactions at the other end of the Capitol.

NONE of the types of change desired by Congress was crippling to the bill. All but the time-limit amendment were offensive to the President, however. The anticonvoy provision he regarded as unnecessary, while the other two he considered as infringements on his constitutional power in the field of foreign relations.

Nevertheless, when Rayburn suggested that a leaders' meeting to discuss amendments would be a useful step, the President welcomed the proposal and promptly authorized him to make the necessary arrangements. At the meeting itself, while no commitments were asked or given, he gave every appearance of assent when Rayburn and the chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee read drafts of the four amendments. He also told the gathering, extremely emphatically, that he was ready to consider any other amendments, from whatever source, which did not negate his bill's objectives.

Both Democrats and Republicans were impressed by his showing of willingness to meet Congress halfway. As the amendments were introduced the next day in the House, and word of the President's new attitude spread through the Capitol, the atmosphere improved greatly. The meeting had an obviously healthy effect.

DESPITE the isolationist outcry to the contrary, the President adopted his new attitude at the beginning of the lease-lend bill's history. In the past, when such great measures were afoot, it was the custom to prepare them first, and then to confront even his most intimate Congressional henchmen with the fait accompli. This time, instead, he revealed his plan to Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, Senators George, Byrnes and Pat Harrison, and Speaker Rayburn and House Majority Leader John McCormack. They talked it over with him at length, and the original conception was considerably revised.

Then, again on the motion of Speaker Rayburn, recourse was had to the legislative drafting service, an official agency of the House, where members have their measures prepared. The lawyers of the legislative drafting service were presented with the statement of objectives and methods agreed on between the President and the leaders, and with a quantity of factual data prepared at the State, War, Navy and Treasury Departments. The drafting job was done by Middleton Beaman, chief House drafting officer, and the successive drafts were submitted for editing and suggestions, not to the White House, but to the Congressional leaders. Thus the much-criticized original lease-lend bill was a Congressional product, except with respect to the policy it implemented.

REPUBLICANS, to be sure, were not consulted in this preparatory period. House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin was considered too grimly isolationist to be a useful adviser, while the acting Republican chieftain in the Senate, Warren Austin of Vermont, did not wish to be called to the White House for fear of losing his authority with his fellows. But on the whole, now that events may be seen in some perspective, the initial hullabaloo over the lease-lend bill looks a little excitable.

The powers granted are far less than the powers over foreign affairs reserved to the President in the Constitution. The method of preparing the bill was far less dictatorial than methods often employed in the past. And the spirit shown by the White House is conciliatory rather than hectoring.

Films to Aid U. S. Defense

Slap At "Appeasers"

Walter Wanger, 46-year-old movie producer, has turned out films with locales ranging from insane asylums to colleges. (There is a difference, Hollywood ideas notwithstanding).

Now his constant search for ideas for new movies has led into the national defense program and into the question of how the movies are to help.

Wanger said here yesterday that it's time for people in America to get serious about their individual stakes in the national defense program.

"It is much later than you think," he said. "The totalitarian countries have taken the American methods of industrial production, and applied them 24 hours a day, seven days a week for the advance of tyranny.

"Our own salvation is to take our own methods, streamline them, and apply them for freedom."

A World War flyer, Wanger is modest about his ability to qualify as a military expert. For example, he would not make a guess about whether England can defeat Germany on the continent. He said, however, that England will win with all-out aid from America short of manpower.

America's share in the democratic struggle, he said, has been held back by too much of a "waltz-time" idea of defense.

"The national defense program program must be taken far more seriously," he remarked. "Democracy has become a pay-as-you-enter affair, it's not a free ride any more."

As an example of realistic defense work, he suggested that every Selective Service trainee be given a course in both Spanish and Portuguese. With this, he raised the question of how many legislators could name all the Latin-American countries, and how many citizens know the languages of their South American neighbors.

He also raised the question of how soon businessmen in America would wake up to some of the facts about the Nazi regime.

"It's said that some of our businessmen are appeasers," he remarked. "I wish they'd see what happened to businessmen in Germany. Business helped Hitler to power, thinking that Hitler would serve them. Now they find themselves just cogs in the Hitler machine—merely managers without any say over their profits, their managements, their labor. That is the penalty paid by business for toying with authoritarianism."

Besides rating among Hollywood's top producers, Wanger is president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and an advisor for Nelson Rockefeller, defense coordinator for Latin-American affairs. His wife is Joan Bennett, the actress.

As a producer, Wanger revealed, he is studying the movie possibilities of a well-known classic Mexican novel, and two or three South American stories.

Other movie men are going to work on the same problem, he said, to bring the facts about the United States into South America via the movies, and the other way around. "It must be a two-way proposition," he said.

In all this work, the problem of the movies will be to get away from "escapist" films and be "more realistic."

"But the last thing we want to see is regimentation of the screen," he said. "The regimented screen in Germany, Italy, Russia, has lost effectiveness. In this country the screen is not suspect."

In its need to remain free, he said, the screen is like the press and the radio. Without these, this country would never have known what it does now about the war and its threat to America. He said they did their job while educators and legislators alike played a role like Japanese idols who "see no evil, hear no evil, speak no evil."

Defense Classes For Out-of-School Youth Planned

Fifteen classes under the National Defense training program are being organized in District public schools for out-of-school youth and for enrollees in work projects under the National Youth Association, according to a tentative schedule from L. J. Cantrell, assistant superintendent of schools.

For out-of-school youth, including CCC enrollees, evening classes in electrical work, woodworking, sheet metal and auto mechanics are planned at Abbot Vocational School; in auto mechanics at McKinley High School, and in machine shop at Central High School.

The NYA classes will be typing, shorthand, multigraph and card-punch machine at Chamberlain Vocational School; typing and business machines at Dennison, and auto mechanics and welding at Abbot. Exact dates have not been announced.

A Day Of Decision

By Mark Sullivan

How Far Will Aid To Britain Go?

THE PURPOSE of the "lease-lend" bill is, aid to Britain. That is the purpose of this bill, and it is the immediate national purpose upon which we are now acting. Aid to Britain is a policy as strongly held by our Government, as strongly supported by our people, as any policy of any government ever was or could be.

But back of this policy there is a broad, continuing national purpose. This broad purpose is actually two purposes. They are:

Aid to Britain; and

Stay out of war.

THESE TWO purposes cannot be numbered as (1) and (2). As they now lie in the public mind, they are equal. The time may come when one is stronger than the other, but for the present the national policy is to carry the two purposes along hand in hand.

Carrying two purposes of equal weight is always difficult, usually impossible. A rule for the successful conduct of every sort of affair, including national policy, is to avoid having two objectives, to concentrate on one. When, as sometimes, it is impossible to avoid having two objectives, then one of them should be clearly designated as major, the other as minor. To try to hold two purposes equal, and to pursue both with equal force, is a certain source of confusion, usually ending in disaster.

These two present purposes of ours can be carried along together up to a certain point. Up to a certain point, the two purposes do not necessarily conflict. But there is a point at which they do conflict. That point will be, for America, a day of decision, when we must make up our minds which of the two purposes we value most.

THE TIME is likely to come—is certain to come if the war goes on long enough—when we must either say (a) that our wish to aid Britain in distress is so great that we will go all the way for her, actually enter the war, with men and everything else; or, (b) we must say that our wish to keep out of war is so great that we will not enter the war, with men, even if it is clear that in the lack of our doing this Britain would be likely to lose.

Between these two courses, some day in all likelihood, we must make decision. Quite likely the decision will be made for us by events, to which our reaction will be determined by our emotion rather than our reason.

That time, however, is some distance ahead. For the present our purpose is to give Britain help which she must have—and, in giving this help, to choose the form least likely to take us into war. By this test is the lease-lend bill to be judged, in comparison with other ways of giving the same kind and degree of help.

THE FORM of help that would be least likely to carry us later into war would be cash—a loan or gift or extension of credit by our Government to Britain. Congress would merely make a grant of money to Britain. With this money, Britain would buy such supplies as she needs, make such use of them as she deems best. All the discretion would be in Britain, all the responsibility on Britain. There would be no continuing responsibility on us—our responsibility would end with the act of making the loan.

After making the loan, we would be no farther into the war than we now are. True, the Axis powers might regard our making the loan as an unfriendly act, and therefore as an act taking us farther toward participation in the war. But the fact is we have already done almost the equivalent of making a loan to Britain—our Government's transfer of 50 destroyers to Britain, taking compensation in the form of naval bases, did not differ greatly from making a loan.

In any event, if the making of a loan be regarded as a step in the direction of entering the war, it would be a single step, stopping with this one step. It would be a completed step. It would be a step—but not a setting out upon an inevitable progression of steps. It would not be—this is the important point—a continuing step.

THAT, a continuing step, is what the lease-lend bill is. By the pending bill, Congress makes a grant of money available to the President. With this money the President, in his discretion, would do the following things:

"Manufacture in arsenals, factories and shipyards . . . or otherwise procure (materials of war.)" Having thus procured materials of war, the President would "sell, transfer, exchange, lease, lend, or otherwise dispose of (the materials) to any . . . government" in his discretion.

What this language describes is not a single step, it is a course of action over a long period, as long as the war lasts. Daily and hourly the President will exercise the discretion given him by this bill. This continuing discretion means, of course, a continuing responsibility. Each exercise of discretion carries the possibility of taking us further toward entry into the war.

Defense Board Denies Putting Pressure on Ford

Defense Commission officials last night emphatically denied bringing pressure on Henry Ford to force him to sign a contract with the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers.

A spokesman for the commission made the denial after Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, stated on the House floor that he had been informed the commission and the National Labor Relations Board are trying "to compel Ford to agree to a closed shop."

Ford, according to Hoffman's informant, has said he would rather turn over his plant to the Government at a yearly rental of $1 than "deny employment to American citizens merely because they refused to submit to the demands of the C. I. O.," the Michigan Representative reported.

The defense commission spokesman said there has been "no communication whatever on the "closed shop" issue between William S. Knudsen, Sidney Hillman or their aides and Ford or his representatives.

Film Stars Mobbed At Cocktail Party

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

"Gee, kid, I almost had my clothes torn off but I got three George Rafts, a Lana Turner, two Wally Beerys and some other guy, I can't read his signature."

That jubilant remark from a school girl to her friend, overheard at the entrance to the Hotel Mayflower's East Room, might serve as a capsule description of the Birthday Ball Eve cocktail party given yesterday for those visiting Hollywood stars.

It was truly colossal. Or what's your word for the sight of a movie queen chucking a blushing Senator on the chin, Al Ritz (Ritz Bros.) mobbed to his knees by autograph hunters, Maureen O'Hara trying to duck a tipsy masher—all this going on in a room jammed to the molding with people?

The thing started out to be a semiformal reception, with a receiving line and everything. The hostesses, lined up nicely just inside the East Room door, were Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, Mrs. Jean Hersholt and Mrs. C. C. Pettijohn.

Everything went along fine, for a while. Wally Beery and his daughter, Carol Ann, meeting admirers in front of the canape table . . . folks being formally introduced to one another . . . comparatively few autograph books visible . . . plenty of room for photographers to make pictures.

Then some of the teen age guests, once inside, began smuggling their printed invitations to pals loitering outside the ropes. In this manner one invitation admitted from 2 to 10 hero and heroine worshippers.

In less time than it takes to say Red Skelton, the room was a babbling, bubbling mass of scrambled film players, Senators, Congressmen, press people, Government officials and those sign-here-please demons, mostly the last.

FLAME-THROWING GERMANS ATTACK CUPOLA OF MAGINOT LINE

Berlin, Jan. 29 (AP).—The German high command's documentary film "Victory in the West," was shown today to the press but it left unanswered the question whether Germany has a secret weapon and, if so, what it is like.

The film account of France's defeat revealed a huge amount of mechanical war equipment which clicked with almost unbelievable precision. It indicated that the German triumph in the west was no walkaway, that there was spirited resistance by the French—especially in the Maginot Line—and by the British and Belgians.

The German air force appeared to have had things its own way and vast German ground movements were shown as undisturbed by enemy fliers.

German predominance in heavy artillery, the fleetness and mobility of her mechanized forces and precise cooperation of all arms of the service were strikingly pictured. Numerous photographers of the German army's propaganda companies who made the photographic records were said to have lost their lives.

'Star-Spangled' Singer Here

Golden-haired Lucy Monroe sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" five times yesterday and had a good time doing it, even though, technically, it was work.

Miss Monroe, whose soprano voice is familiar to radio listeners and stagegoers, has become a "Star-Spangled" specialist during the last few years, having sung the National Anthem more than 800 times in public.

Yesterday she was in Washington to make an "all-American" recording with the National Symphony Orchestra; all-American because Miss Monroe was born and did all her music study in this country, because the orchestra was guest conducted by American-born Charles O'Connell, and because most of the players in the symphony are native-born Americans.

"I love to sing 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' " she said. "It is not hard for the average person to sing at all, no matter what they say. Just breathe properly and don't try to over emphasize."

Yesterday's recording of the anthem was made for RCA Victor.

It Is Better to Adapt to Husband's Infidelity Than to Live Without Him, If You Love Him, Divorcee Tells 'Mrs. X,' Citing Her Experience

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Permit me to offer my opinion regarding the problem of "Mrs. X"—the unhappy wife whose letter was published in your column last Sunday, asking what to do about her unfaithful husband. Having lived through a similar problem, perhaps my views will be of some help to her.

My husband, too, was unfaithful. I felt humiliated and broken in spirit. I left him, taking our four children with me, and got a divorce. I had decided this was the only course open to me. Yet, it did not solve my problem, in the sense of making me any happier. He did not marry "the other woman," and, as the case stands now, probably never will.

Having divorced my husband, I prepared to "start life over again," hoping for peace of mind in rearing my children. But I found things to cope with I had never dreamed of. My daughters, aged 12 and 10, loved their father; and as they grew older and understood the reason for our parting they taxed me with depriving them of their daddy—by not "making him love me again," as they put it. My two small boys missed their father, too; and at the end of each summer, it made my heart ache to hear them talk of "having seen daddy." This is only a small part of the price of divorce.

Monogamously inclined wives (such as I was, and such as I judge "Mrs. X" to be), cannot find happiness with other men. And they feel hopelessly inadequate in dealing with the "small boy" problems of toy-mending, etc. It is painful to hear one's growing daughters carefully explaining to school friends "why they have no daddy"—and children in the teens are so thoughtlessly cruel to one another.

"Mrs. X" has been told by her husband that he has no intention of marrying the other woman. She has that assurance to build on in working to perpetuate her marriage. She must have patience. She must rebuild her self esteem by keeping busy. In time, her husband will come back to her, and all her waiting will be well repaid. He may even say to her approximately what my husband said to me: "I have been a fool; an awful fool. Women do not understand men and their vagaries. A man can be attracted to another woman; even live with her, and still love his wife. Men run away from responsibility. They hate routine."

"Mrs. X" may get a divorce, but it will not bring her happiness. When her son or daughter feels the need of a father's help, all her mother love cannot supply that need. The Christmas season will make her wish she had never heard of divorce . . . Walking with her children on Sundays, seeing other families out together, she will feel strange and insecure. There is no escape from the desolation that follows in the wake of the "broken family circle."

My story has no happy ending. I had my second chance at happiness when my divorced husband came to tell me how foolish he had been; and asked me to remarry him. Although I still loved him with all my heart, I still felt proud and hurt, and so I persisted in my stubborn attitude—and as the years drift by, I continue to pay the price of my silly stubbornness.

In another city across the continent, my husband lives his unsatisfactory life. He still sees the other woman, but not nearly so often, according to his own reports. He has lost his ambition and, instead of furthering his career, is content to fritter away his time with casual acquaintances. The children and I have receded to the back of his mind. He no longer yearns to have us back, although he continues to be kind to us, in his way.

He called me a "cold, proud, unforgiving woman" when I refused a reconciliation—and he spoke the truth. I hold myself responsible, today, for his loss of ambition and for my children's incomplete lives. And so I would say to "Mrs. X": Go to school. Learn things you've always wanted to know. If money is scarce, find schools which require no tuition fee—offering courses in the crafts as well as the arts. Fill your life with activities. Keep healthily occupied. Your renewed zest-for-living will again attract your husband's attention and interest.

I would say to "Mrs. X:" Be patient with your husband and always kind. He will remember your sweetness long after he has forgotten the other woman's "sex appeal." And when he offers you another chance at a normal married life, don't spurn him in foolish pride. Don't try to punish him. You would only be punishing yourself. On that point I know whereof I speak!

And now, after giving "Mrs. X" the advice I needed so sorely years ago, I must turn again to my duties. But there is not much pleasure in the contemplation. For I know that in just a few years more, I will have no children in my home to make it an interesting and a busy place. However, I am acting—at long last—on my own advice. I am going to school and otherwise renewing my contacts with the world outside my home. I know that I am going to have to "live alone and like it"—because there is only one man in the world for me, and I deliberately put him out of my life.

Divorce is no certain investment in happiness. Freedom from pain cannot always be bought that way. The yoke of the divorced woman is heavy with memory and heartache—harder to bear than the humiliations of a husband's infidelity. Freedom of spirit is the thing to be desired. And this freedom can be developed within the framework of the marriage. One can temporarily forget (can take the edge off remembering) a husband's frailties. It is easier to adapt to his shortcomings than to live without him, when you love him and when there are children. As you grow older you will find that his lifelong companionship has been worth whatever price you have paid to keep it. For the way is long and the burden grows heavier when one walks alone.

ANOTHER MRS. X.

Illuminating Slant On Divorce

DEAR CORRESPONDENT: Thank you for an interesting dissertation on the after-effects of divorce—upon the person who employs this major social operation as a means of revenge and not as a spiritual corrective. It should give "Mrs. X" grave pause—in case she should be thinking of leaving her husband for the purpose of punishing him, and not for the purpose of reviving her own will to live, and strength to serve her children's interests. M. H.

Navy Bean Soup a Capitol Hill Favorite

A VERY special bean soup flavored with ham has appeared daily on the menu at both the House and Senate restaurants for a number of years. It is a sustaining soup and just the kind that is appreciated on these cold grim days. The original recipe by which the Capital bean soup was made came from a former Montana Senator.

The Senator who contributed the recipe seemed to realize that ham does for bean soup what spareribs do for sauerkraut—give it a distinctive flavor. It is interesting to note that his recipe did not include tomatoes which we find in so many bean soups served hither and yon. But for making excellent bean soup, as for making good baked beans, it is necessary to use the little round white Boston pea beans. The matter of pureeing the beans or leaving them whole is a matter of personal choice. But the general way of making the bean soup is the same in any cook's language. Here is the general procedure:

Navy Bean Soup

Soak one cup of Boston pea beans overnight. Cook a ham bone to secure stock. Add the soaked beans to the stock. Saute 1 sliced onion in 1 tablespoon butter before adding to the stock and 2 stalks of celery, diced if desired. Simmer for about 4 hours. Add salt if necessary, but the ham stock ordinarily furnishes enough.

Garnish the soup with thin slices of hard-cooked egg and lemon slices just before serving.

Furniture Finishes of Today Aid in Preserving Wood

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Embellishment of furniture by means of paints, varnishes and lacquers is one of the oldest decorative processes on record. The Egyptians used both paint and varnish, while the use of lacquer in the Orient goes back indefinitely.

But each age has had its own ideas about finishes, for fashion has taken over the matter and dictated the destinies of paint, varnish and lacquer. In Europe, a good deal of medieval furniture was polychromed, while much of Italian and English Renaissance furniture was given an oil finish.

Painted furniture came into high vogue in the seventeenth century when the importations of lacquered pieces from the Orient were being brought over in such abundance. The more formal furniture followed the Oriental styles, but much peasant furniture developed painted motifs of local character, such as the Swiss, Bavarian and Swedish. The painstaking lacquer finishes of the Orient were imitated widely by European workmen in the seventeenth century, notably by Martin, a French carriage painter who gave his name to a process we know as Vernis-Martin.

A grect deal of beautiful Queen Anne furniture was lacquered and decorated in the Chinese style, while French pieces of Louis XVI were often painted in pastel colors or off-whites. In the late eighteenth century came Italian painted furniture, typified by the Venetian styles with their florid decorations.

Even natural wood finishes receive a treatment of varnish and wax, for protection and to bring out the grain. Early cabinet makers toned their woods by exposing them to the sunlight, then rubbing them with beeswax, or else gave the wood a coat of dark varnish and wax. From the seventeenth century on, a preparation of spirit and shlelac was used, while later came various types of varnishes.

In the present day, finishes have been perfected still further, till they have achieved surfaces impervious to almost any deterioration and with amazingly quick drying properties. The development of bleaches and photographic finishes for woods are also contributions of our times.

Shoe Gadget Makes the Feet Pleasant Mates

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor.

"Give me a shoe that is really comfortable" is the cry of women who are looking toward spring and the call of the open road. Every woman, no matter how frivolous her taste is in shoes, likes at least one pair in which she can walk in with perfect ease.

With the first breath of spring women begin thinking about shopping tours and walking in the wide open spaces. Their first concern is shoes for the occasion. James Fikany, the inventor of adjustable-arch shoes, has solved their problem, as well as that of the active career woman who has to be on her feet a great deal of the time.

Success Story

Once an immigrant cobbler, Mr. Fikany has lived a success story that reads like a Horatio Alger tale. He has worked with shoes all his life but it took a woman—his wife—to inspire him to make his revolutionary shoe. He experimented for five years with wood and tin until he got what he wanted. Then, less than a year ago, Mrs. Roosevelt discovered the merits of his shoes and now has over a dozen pairs in her wardrobe.

The secret of Mr. Fikany's success lies in a tiny screw. This screw is concealed by the inner sole of the shoe. By lifting a small leather strip there is revealed the screw which magically adjusts the arch to the length which fits your foot. Even if your feet aren't mates your worries are over. It's not necessary to buy shoes of different size, but merely to adjust each shoe to fit the foot properly.

Mr. Fikany is at a local department store this week to demonstrate personally the eas e with which his shoe fits any type of foot.

No Place for Toys?

Is there any really good place for toys? Seems as if they're a housing problem whether there are shelves, chests or closets galore to keep them in, making a revolutionary clean-up and throw-away necessary every once in a while—to say nothing about holding the children sternly to that daily picking-up routine.

Learn to Play Piano at Home

YOU NEVER lack for company when you can play the piano The gang flocks round for your gay dance tunes—and how you rate with the new beau when he discovers you have such a grand accomplishment!

Learning to play the piano needn't mean weary hours of drudgery. With a simple chart you quickly teach yourself notes and keys, then by a short-cut method you can soon learn lots of popular tunes.

On your chart you're shown, life size, the part of the piano keyboard most used in popular music. Keys are numbered, and with each one is the note that is its music-staff symbol. Just slip your chart behind the piano keyboard, so that each pictured key is directly above each real key, and in a jiffy you can tell what key to strike for what note.

But, in playing popular hits, you don't have to worry about the difficult part of the music. There's a simple short-cut way to play such tunes, using the chords indicated by the little guitar diagrams you find above your music staff. And to make things even easier, you usually use the same few chords throughout a piece.

Relaxing Eases Strain In Face and in Voice

Radio Actress Says Frequent 'Let-Go' Keeps Her Fit

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are probably many natural born relaxers—like the old man who fell asleep ever time he sat down to worry! But it is something the very ambitious have to learn! It doesn't come natural to them! And the more important the job and the busier one is, the greater the necessity for learning to relax.

One of the first signs of tension is the sharp edge it gives the voice. So I decided to follow that line and find out how a radio actress combats tension—radio work is a notorious tension maker because of the timing: "Ready, one second and you're on the air—Hello!"

One of the radio's most talented is Bess Johnson of the lovely voice, and she believes that anyone can learn to relax so successfully that moments of easing up can be snatched at intervals throughout the day. She says you can get so you can relax in an office chair, or hanging on to a subway strap! If she can do that, her program is worth trying.

Exercise Regularly

She starts the day right with a few easy, relaxing exercises—not just occasionally, but every morning. And since muscular tension is tied up with muscular tension, it is obvious that a relaxing send-off has its points.

First, a good, tip-to-toe stretch like this: Lie on the back on the floor, stretched to full extension, arms on floor overhead and legs down. Pull, then go limp. Repeat the stretch—relax six times, and when you stop, smile! If you think it's funny, laugh out loud! Smiles and laughter tend to ease the tension out of your face.

To relax your shoulders, shrug them. Do this by hunching your shoulders up around your ears and back down, circling with the shoulder tips. That one, by the way, can be done when you are sitting for hours in a chair.

Let Muscles Relax

Another Bess Johnson favorite is to stand with feet apart, then flop over at the waist, letting arms dangle toward the floor with neck, shoulders and back completely limp. Stretch up again, then go limp. Do this half a dozen times, then flop over at the waist and swing from side to side, like a pendulum back and forth, loose and easy.

Take another stretch and let go, knees and all, sagging all over. Do this two or three times and when you get the hang of loosening your joints, crumble down on the floor in a heap, like a rag doll, every muscle relaxed. Think of that tune, "Let Yourself Go!" That's what you are doing and it's wonderful for you!

Miss Johnson is a firm believer in practicing relaxation as an energy saver. It's spendthrift to let yourself get tied up in knots—much of the time over nothing! You do better work when you save yourself by relaxing mind and body at odd moments. Also, you will get more work done!

Likes a Little Shine

Hollywood, Calif.—While most girls strive to hide a shiny nose, Merle Oberon, movie star, courts one by polishing off her entire face with a soft chamois after applying cleasing cream and astringent. Follows with a very thin dusting of powder which doesn't completely hide the shine, then lipstick and mascara. While doing exotic oriental roles in the early days of her career, Merle used powdered bronze on her cheekbones to achieve the right camera effects and found she liked the complexion highlights so well that she now effects them in her off-screen makeup.

Bess Johnson, radio actress (above) attributes much of her success to her ability to relax at odd moments. She snatches a minute on the subway or in the office to decrease nerve tension. Always her secret is complete relaxation

Color Trend Invades Cotton Household Goods

The trend to color in the home has invaded white sales to such an extent that this year the seeker after household cottons finds herself surrounded by pastels instead of white.

Counter after counter bloom with all the soft tints of a flower bed. Many of these towels are matched t. bathmats and shower curtains to form beautiful ensembles.

Other counters boldly display delicately tinted sheets that once would have been considered "hussies" in the department. Some of these have appliqued designs in white; others, eyelet embroidered hems. Then there are printed sheets and white sheets with printed-colored borders.

Nazis in Paris Can't Extinguish Fashion Ardor

Paris (via Berlin) (AP).—First spring styles to appear in Paris are hats of rainbow brilliance. These gay hats—of crimson velvet, turquoise felt, mauve grosgrain, poison green wool—are used to offset the sobriety of the black dresses and coats most Parisians now wear.

"Traffic cop" capes are popular at the moment. Feminine versions of hooded garments the French police wear are done in navy, putty pink, gray, or in plaids and checks, and are worn over warm tweed suits and jersey tailor-mades. These capes, full-length and roomy, button up snugly against wind and rain.

The "carriage trade" lives again in Paris, and happy is the dressmaker before whose house stand old-fashioned vehicles attended by silk-hatted coachmen. Those shoppers who cannot afford a cab and carriage usually walk, for the gasoline shortage has made a taxi a Paris rarity.

Four Cabinet Hostesses Entertain in One Day

By Hope Ridings Miller

WEDNESDAY HAS LONG been known in Washington as "Cabinet Day," but it never deserved the title more than it did yesterday, when four Cabinet hostesses practically took over the Capital's social calendar. Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the Secretary of War, entertained at a luncheon in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Frank Knox, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was feted at a luncheon given by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes. Then, in the afternoon, two more Cabinet ladies—Mrs. Frank Walker, wife of the Postmaster General, and Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce—were "at home" to several hundred guests.

Hope Ridings Miller

The receptions are described elsewhere on this page. The luncheons—well, they're part of my story. Mrs. Stimson's fete was one in a series given annually for Mrs. Roosevelt by wives of Cabinet members. The party took place at Woodley, the Stimson home on Cathedral Avenue, and the company included several guests from New York. Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson was there; also, Mrs. Henry Goddard Leach and Secretary Stimson's sister, Miss Candace Stimson.

Other guests were Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of the Chief of Staff; Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, wife of the Undersecretary of War; Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, Mrs. Edward Stettinius, Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., Mrs. Keith Merrill, Miss Janet Fish and Mrs. Jules James.

MEANWHILE, "Tradition," Mrs. Keyes' home, was the scene of the luncheon given for Mrs. Knox. Originally planned as a fete for both Mrs. Cordell Hull and Mrs. Knox, the event turned into a one-Cabinet-star affair when the wife of the Secretary of State decided she had better obey doctor's orders and continue cutting her social schedule to a minimum.

The Supreme Court, Congress, the diplomatic corps and residential society was represented in the company, which included Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Mrs. Foster Stearns, Mrs. Alfred W. Klieforth, wife of the American Consul General at Cologne, Germany; Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger, Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. Theodore Chandler and Mrs. John C. Robertson, of Annapolis.

Mrs. Keyes will be off early next week on a lecture tour through the Middlewest. In April she will go to Texas, where she will give a special course at Our Lady of the Lake College, at San Antonio. From Easter Monday until May 30, she will give one evening lecture and hold two roundtables each week, in addition to conducting three morning classes. The latter will be designed to help students interested in literary and journalistic work, and will be supplemented by practical assistance with the makeup of the college magazine, the Palms, and the college newspaper, the Phoenix.

On days when Mrs. Keyes is not conducting classes, she will continue work on her new novel which is scheduled for autumn publication.

WHILE MRS. WALKER and Mrs. Jones were receiving a throng that seemed to be at least half of Washington yesterday afternoon, a number of Capitalites were guests of Mrs. Roosevelt at a White House musicale.

One of a number of such affairs given annually at the Executive Mansion, the fete was followed by tea in the State Dining Room. Artists of the day were Miss Marlyn Crittendon, violinist; William Masselos, pianist, and Prescott Barrows, accompanist.

Rounding out yesterday's crowded calendar, which also included a press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt attended the performance of "Claudia," at the National Theater last night.

The First Lady today will entertain at a White House luncheon the stars of stage and screen who are here for the President's Birthday celebrations, and tonight she will make the rounds of the hotels to attend the balls at which the stars will appear. Tomorrow afternoon, she will be present at the Girl Scouts' ceremony at the D. A. R. hall, at 4 o'clock, and in the evening she will attend the District Municipal Assembly, at Barker Hall, at 8:30 o'clock.

On Saturday evening, Mrs. Roosevelt will be in Richmond, Va., to attend a meeting at which the polltax question will be discussed. Her next press conference will take place on Monday at 10:15 o'clock, and later she will attend Mrs. Townsend's morning musicale. That same day she will be feted at a luncheon to be given by Mrs. Jesse Jones.

Mrs. Jesse Jones (right) greets Mrs. Emmanuel Lombard at the Shoreham Hotel's West Ballroom, where Mrs. Jones held her first official Cabinet "at home" since her husband became Secretary of Commerce

Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Jesse Jones Are Hostesses for 'at Homes'

By Carolyn Bell

"I think I have competition," laughed Mrs. Frank Walker wife of the Postmaster General, who was "at home" yesterday afternoon between 4 and 6 o'clock. She wasn't referring to Mrs. Jesse Jones who was also receiving yesterday, but to the gang of youngsters, kerchiefs tied about their heads, who were pursuing possible movie actors in the lobby of the Carlton Hotel. Long about 5 o'clock the lobby was a seething mass of diplomats and officials, out to make their calls . . . and autograph seekers.

It was Mrs. Walker's first experience as hostess at an "at home" and she was thoroughly enjoying it. Meanwhile, Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, was also receiving for the first time at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mme. Loudon, wife of the Netherlands Minister, wearing a pretty red feather hat and a squirrel coat, was an early caller at Mrs. Walker's party.

The hostess wore a long black frock enlivened by a bright sequin flower on the bodice and a colored sash. Not far from where she received a lighted fountain gurgled and splashed. It was banked with peach gladioli, ferns and lavender sweet peas.

In the adjoining room, a long buffet table had been set up. A tall silver urn, filled with pink and white snapdragons and roses centered the table. Low mounds of flowers were placed on either side of it. Chocolate and caramel cakes vied with cookies and sandwiches for attention. Tea was served at one end while coffee was poured at the other. Generally assisting was Mrs. Vincent Burke, wife of the District Postmaster. All of the ladies assisting wore large gardenias, a gift from Mr. Walker.

Mrs. Stanley Reed Among Guests

Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Associate Justice, was there, as were Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Claude Swanson, Mrs. R. D. W. Connor, Mrs. Ambrose O'Connell, Mrs. Vincent Miles, wearing a white blouse glittering with sequins; Mrs. Jess Wolcott, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Herman Koppleman and Mrs. Charles O. Andrews, wife of the Senator from Florida, who was dressed in a gray wool ensemble and matching hat.

Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling wore a smart costume suit of pencil blue. She chatted with Miss Vera Bloom and Mrs. Sol Bloom, who was lauzhingly recounting her experiences with the ardent band of autograph hunters. Mrs. Consuelo Seone was there, as were Mrs. Edwin E. Blythe, Mrs. Caleb B. Bell, jr., Mrs. South Trimble, jr., Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, Mrs. Walter E. Hitchcock, Mrs. Ralph Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa; the Attache of the Chinese Embassy and Mme. Kwong, Miss Dorothy Ramspeck and Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, chic in a brown suit and sables. Also assisting were Mrs. Ramsey S. Black, Mrs. K. P. Aldrich, Mrs. J. Austin Latimer, Mrs. William J. Bray and Mrs. William F. Cronin.

Mrs. Jesse Jones Also Entertains

During the same hours, Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce was receiving hundreds of guests in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. Gowned in a black crepe frock, fashioned floor length, cut on straight lines, and accented with passementerie at the neckline, Mrs. Jones received her guests at the right of the entrance to the ballroom. Receiving with her was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, gowned also in black with a gold kid girdle and a heavy antique gold necklace. Both Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Wilson wore orchid corsages.

In the center of the room was the bountiful tea table. Covered with an exquisite cloth of ecru point venice lace, the table was centered with a large low bowl of blended spring flowers. Flanking it were two-three-branched silver candelabra holding tall white tapers. An unusual departure from the normal tea-time custom was the fact that four assistants officiated at a time at pouring tea and coffee, two for each beverage, and they were seated one on each side of the long rectangular table.

Apparently most of the hundreds of guests had decided to put off spring hat buying until February, which is unusual in Washington for the week or so after Christmas normally brings forth an epidemic of pre-Easter bonnets. Those few that were noted indicated that this spring will be a saner hat year than usual, for they were mostly of the flowered cloche type, low crowned and none of them had the shooting feathers and gadgets of former years. One unusual and lovely one, a turban, surmounted by a cluster of open roses, was worn by Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson.

Many Assist At Tea Table

Among those assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. William C. Costello, Mrs. Sidney Morey, Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes, Mrs. Norman Baxter and Mrs. Emil Schramm, who had with her two guests from New York, Mrs. Earl Stewart and Mrs. H. Goodwin Connor.

Also assisting were Mrs. Sam H. Husbands, Mrs. Howard J. Klossner, Mrs. Charles B. Enderson, Mrs. Frederick Van Nuys, Mrs. McGruder Winfield, Mrs. Adolf Berle, Mrs. Timothy Ansberry, Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Mrs. Richard Kleberg, Mrs. Clarence N. Goodwin, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson and Mrs. John Goodwin Locke.

Arriving early at the tea were Mme. Bianchi, wife of the Minister of Portugal. She was accompanied by her chic daughter, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, who wore grey squirrel. The Misses Ida and Pauletta Guffey, sisters of Senator Joseph Guffey, were also among the early arrivals, as were Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of Senator Hughes; Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Emmanuel Lombard, Mrs. William C. Harllee and hundreds of others.

Throng Jams Fete for Stars

"Has anyone asked YOU for your autograph?" the local, or garden variety of celebrity plaintively asked one another yesterday at the cocktail party given for visiting stars here for the President's Birthday.

Every Washington person of importance had to admit that not one of the throng which jammed the Mayflower lobby and the East Room, where the function took place, had even glanced in their direction.

Hosts were Mrs. Alben W. Barkley, Mrs. Robert La Follette, Mrs. Jean Hersholt, wife of the actor, and Mrs. Charles C. Pettijohn.

Many Unexpectedly Arrive

"But I only issued 150 invitations to this affair," said Mr. Pettijohn, gazing at the surging mob of guests who jammed his party. They zoomed down on the refreshments table like a herd of locusts leaving only empty plates and a ham, sent by Representative Charles Kramer, of Los Angeles, picke to the very bone.

Caught in the rush to see Sweater Girl Lana Turner, Wallace Beery, Red Skelton and other celebrities, were such personages as William Knudsen (born in Denmark like Actor Hersholt, and present by special request of Mrs. H.) and Senators La Follette and Barkley.

J. Edgar Hoover bowed over the red-fingernail-tipped hand of Lana Turner. She was practically smothered in a tremendous coat of silver foxes. Atop her blonde locks was a tiny flower hat of pale pink and dark blue roses. Miss Turner confided to Senator Barkley that she was "dazed" by Washington.

Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Aldace Walker looked rather like movie stars themselves. Mrs. Tydings wore with her frock a fetching white feather hat.

Mrs. Barkley, at the head of the receiving line, was smart in black, with a matching hat trimmed with white flowers and a gardenia corsage. Mrs. La Follette had on a black ensemble with an orchid pinned to her shoulder; Mrs. Hersholt was also in black, with a cluster of camelias, and Mrs. Pettijohn had chosen a red ensemble. Receiving with them was Mrs. Jack Lawrence, wife of a Hays office official.

George Raft Among Stars

George Raft, Mrs. Red Skelton, who was kept as busy signing autographs as her husband, and Deanna Durbin were others present from the glamorous Hollywood circle.

Washington guests noted included Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, in tweeds and a jaunty hat with a feather; Mrs. Herbert Feis, pretty Mrs. Frederick Warren, Miss Meredith Howard, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Representative and Mrs. Eugene Worley and Mr. and Mrs. George Dorsey.

Ugo Carusi, who is famous for his imitations of Mussolini and other wellknowns, showed he had another talent. While everybody clamored for the stars' autographs, he was busy writing autographs of celebrities from the President down, which looked exactly like the originals.

John A. Logan Gives Party For Gen. Price

Several hundred Capitalites invited to John A. Logan's party yesterday afternoon for Maj.-Gen. and Mrs. Charles F. B. Price, had a hard time getting there. Autograph seekers blanketed the doorway of the Mayflower Hotel and thronged the lobby in an effort to see stars who were being entertained at the same hotel. From 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock, however, a sizable number of society notables pushed through the crowd and found their way to the Pan-American room, where the Logan party took place.

Gen. Price, who is with the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Price, Mr. Logan's cousin, will leave soon for the West Coast, where Gen. Price has been transferred to duty. The miniature steamship that centered the tea table was in keeping with the farewell theme of the party, which is one of a series of farewell fetes planned for the Prices.

Host Entertains At Dinner Later

The host and his guests of honor received informally. Mrs. Price was smartly turned out in a dark red crepe frock trimmed with fringe. Following the party, Mr. Logan entertained at a dinner at the 1925 F Street Club.

Among those present at the teatime affair were Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, whose husband is attached to the British Embassy; Gen. and Mrs. Albert Lymen Cox, Gen. and Mrs. C. L. Corbin, Admiral and Mrs. Harry E. Yarnell; Senator and Mrs. Scott Lucas.

Others there were former Commissioner and Mrs. George Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butcher, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Distler, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mrs. Emil Hurja, who came on from the party for the stars, as did Miss Meredith Howard; Mr. and Mrs. John Brooks, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shipp.

Numerous Other Notables Attend

Still others there were Representative and Mrs. William D. Byron, Judge and Mrs. Oscar Bland, Mr. and Mrs. James Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Garland Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Freer, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Ballinger, Judge and Mrs. Oscar Luhring, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Duke Shoop, Mr. and Mrs. Burks Summers, Marshall Diggs, Col. and Mrs. Charles March, Mrs. George Thorpe, Mr. and Mrs. George Moffett, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. Milo Perkins, Maj. and Mrs. Parker West and many others.

Entertaining Lags As D. C. Society Starts Trek South

This is the time of year when entertaining slows down a bit and, exhausted by a busy winter, society begins to head South. From now on the accent will be chiefly on small dinners and vacation trips.

Edward Reed, formerly Counselor of the U. S. Embassy in Rome, has selected Havana, where he served at one time, as the place to spend his leave. With Mrs. Reed he will go tomorrow. After several weeks in Cuba they will depart for New Orleans and from there will go to California.

Mrs. James Clement Dunn has taken a house at Boca Grande, Fla., for the winter months, and Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock will leave the middle of February for Nassau.

La Follettes To Be Hosts to Kin

Senator and Mrs. Robert La Follette will have as their guest this week-end former Gov. Philip La Follette, of Wisconsin.

The latter is coming here to speak before the America First meeting at the National Theater Sunday at 4 p. m.

Mrs. Smith Fetes Mrs. Carter Glass At Tea Party

Mrs. J. W. Rixey Smith gathered in a few friends yesterday afternoon for tea in honor of Mrs. Carter Glass, wife of the Senator from Virginia. The very small party was given in the Smith apartment on Connecticut Avenue between 4 and 6.

White lilacs and yellow roses centered the tea table. The hostess wore a chiffon frock of pink with undertones of magenta. Among those assisting were Mrs. Blair Bannister, sister of Senator Glass; Mrs. John S. Barbour, of Fairfax; Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax; Mrs. Gardner Boothe, of Alexandria, and Mrs. John McKee.

THERE'S nothing phantom about the amount of work which the committee for the "phantom ball" of the Navy Relief Society is doing this year. By selling tickets and not staging a party, they will have all the proceeds, instead of just a percentage, for their group. Money raised at this annual ball is the society's only source of revenue, and is used to make loans to our Navy's enlisted men and to help their sick and needy families by supplying hospital care, food and clothing. They hope that even more than usual will be raised this year for that purpose.

Luncheon and a Tea Given For the Departing Gradys

The flurry of parties swirling around Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady, who will leave early next month for San Francisco, included two events on yesterday's calendar. Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold Bowen were hosts at a tea in honor of the departing couple, and earlier in the day Mrs. Alexander V. Dye entertained at a luncheon for Mrs. Grady.

The tea took place at the Bowen home at 2819 Woodley Road. Among those who alternated at the tea table were Mrs. Chester Nimitz, Mrs. Harold Stark, Mrs. Lewis Compton, Mrs. James V. Forrestal, Mrs. F. C. Brown, Mrs. Frank Buck and Mrs. Frank J. Hogan.

Generally assisting Mrs. Bowen were Mrs. Frank Waring, Mrs. John Barriger 3d, and Mrs. George Seitz.

Mrs. Dye's luncheon was in her apartment at 2500 Massachusetts Avenue, where she and her husband lived during the time that he was chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

More recently he served as commercial attache of the United States Embassy at London. He and Mrs. Dye returned to Washington several months ago.

Guests at the luncheon included Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. Henry Coit MacLean, Mrs. Ellsworth Alvord, Mrs. Charles J. Brand and Mrs. South Trimble.

Mrs. Dye is planning another party for Saturday when she and her husband will entertain at a small tea in honor of Rudolf E. Schoenfeld, first secretary of the American Embassy at London, and Russell Benton, United States vice consul at London.

Mrs. Willebrandt Plans Novel Party

Something new in Washington entertainment will be the party to be given by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt on Saturday evening at the Sulgrave Club. A discussion-dinner, it will be a regular dinner for over 100 guests, but with the coffee and cigarette course will come the topic of the evening, a general discussion around the festive board of problems concerning aviation at the moment.

Guests of honor will be members of the aviation committee of the American Bar Association, of which Mrs. Willebrandt is chairman. Members are J. E. Yonge, of Miami, Fla.; Joseph Harrison, of Newark, N. J., and George B. Logan, of St. Louis. Other guests will include officers of the Army Air Corps and many members of committees interested in aviation's problems.

Mrs. A. T. McLean Feted By Women Volunteers

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

More than 10,000 women in 16 States and Alaska are now working in the American Women's Voluntary Services, incorporated a year ago in Washington, according to Mrs. Alice T. McLean, the founder.

Mrs. McLean, who was here from New York, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Sulgrave Club by Mrs. Mary Steele Ross, former director of the women's and professional division of the WPA, who is the newly appointed executive director of the A. W. V. S.

Last week a training institute for regional and local directors was held at the executive offices in New York City, attended by 50 women, some of them from western States, said Mrs. McLean. Those who attended from Washington included Mrs. Edward Warner, Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown, Mrs. Ralph Putman, Mrs. Higginson Rogers, Mrs. W. B. Poland and Mrs. Chloe B. Spencer.

Different subjects were discussed daily and field trips made to the training classes of the New York branch where leaders observed the work being carried on, she explained. One day was devoted to the topic "Cooperation and Not Duplication."

This subject, she said, gives the keynote of the organization's plan to make use of all existing agencies in the community and teach the women cooperation with the police, fire departments and the social agencies. Training courses are set up according to the specific needs in each locality after a survey has been made of training already offered and services which would be needed in any kind of emergency or disaster.

Motor transport units have been organized, communal feeding and sewing classes, and communications courses, said Mrs. McLean. Women also are being encouraged to prepare themselves to do clerical work which will be increasingly needed relieving men for other service in the defense program.

Young women, she said are particularly interested in the trailer canteen courses and emphasis is also being placed on child care and the handling of children in large groups.

Mrs. McLean stressed the need for the stamp of Government approval of the program which is growing rapidly throughout the country, in order that it be of maximum value. It is patterned after the Women's Voluntary Services in Great Britain, she said.

Mrs. McLean was in England, visiting a niece at the time the A. W. V. S. was organized there by Lady Reading. She was impressed from the first, not only by the work the women were doing but also by the spirit of service growing up among them, she said.

A motion picture, of the work of the women in England, was shown after the luncheon yesterday and later, the group visited the local headquarters of the A. W. V. S. at 1605 Connecticut Avenue.

At the luncheon were: Mrs. Florence S. Kerr, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown, Mrs. Warner Snider, of Leesburg, Mrs. Lyman Chalkley, Mrs. Melvin Hall, Miss Lila Steele, Mrs. Melville Church, Mrs. Izetta Jewel Miller, Mrs. J. Herbert Stabler, vice president of the American Women's Voluntary Services; Mrs. Grace Langdon, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Higginson Rogers, Mrs. Edward Warner, Miss Mary LaDane.

Twelve unaffiliated members and three initiates composed the charter list of Chapter R, which was organized Monday evening, with the charter members of the chapter as hostesses to the State officers, District presidents, and other guests.

Going to the root of the problems, the league hopes to reduce disease by improved housing and to take families off relief by finding jobs for the potential wage-earners. It has succeeded in placing over 300 skilled colored workers in National Defense jobs; developing work opportunities for colored painters in colored neighborhoods; assisting in fair adjustment of Negro workers in Civil Service and the placement of better trained workers in some of the best domestic and personal service positions.

The plan proposes that the OPM, which has already taken over the functions and personnel of the Defense Commission's purchasing, priorities, production and industrial materials groups, would integrate the research and statistics unit as a functioning part of the new "super-defense" organization. Legion to Help Find Skilled Workmen

A Nation-wide "man-hunt" for skilled workmen needed by defense industries will be launched next month by 20,000 American Legion posts and auxiliary units.

Members of the legion's national employment committee met with Government officials yesterday at the Ambassador Hotel to map the campaign.

The conferees, who will meet again today and tomorrow to iron out details, were told by Veterans Administrator Gen. Frank T. Hines that they must exert an effort equal to that used in 1917 to find and train the American Expeditionary Force.

More than 11,000 legions posts and 9,000 auxiliary units will cooperate with regional representatives of the Civil Service Commission and State Employment offices.

Vocational training and "refresher" courses for older workers will be instituted for semiskilled workmen and skilled laborers who have lost the edge of their abilities through lengthy unemployment or work in other lines.

The conference was told by Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, that outside of the postoffices of the country, the Legion posts will provide the best contacts with the unemployed.

Maj. Paul H. Griffith, director of the Legion's employment committee, explained that the committee for many years has been hunting jobs for unemployed veterans and others over the age of 40.

"Now," he said, "the tables are reversed. We are hunting the unemployed, instead of the jobs."

Comdr. Sullivan, Who Twice Saved His Ship, Dies

Lieut. Comdr. Daniel A. J. Sullivan, 57, U. S. N. R., winner of the Congressional Medal of Honor, who saved his ship from a depth bomb and again from floating mines in the World War, died Monday at his home, Mount Vernon, N. Y., the Associated Press reported yesterday.

Comdr. Sullivan secured the depth bomb that broke loose on the deck of the converted yacht Christobal, which was guarding a munitions convoy in May, 1918, and rendered it harmless by skillfully setting the delicate trigger mechanism at safety.

Later at Brest the officer plunged overside from his ship to ward off two floating mines which threatened to strike the vessel.

A native of Charleston, S. C., Comdr. Sullivan, a Naval Reserve officer called to active duty during the war, was appointed mediator in the Labor Relations Department of the Public Works Administration in 1937. He later was named senior labor mediator for the National Defense Commission.

D. C. Assembly Plan Favored By First Lady

Establishment of a municipal assembly in Washington was approved by Mrs. Roosevelt at her weekly press conference yesterday. Such a project should prove valuable, she said, as a clearing house for all agencies, and to throw light on what should be done to improve welfare conditions here.

She emphasized once more that under the present set-up, Washington is "the hardest place to fix any responsibility for anything on anybody of any place I have ever lived in." An assembly might be the answer, she implied.

The District's first municipal assembly will get under way tonight in Barker Hall of the Y. M. C. A., and when the plans for its continuation are discussed at 8:30 o'clock, Mrs. Roosevelt will be among those present.

Would Not Bar Child Actors

A recent report of the National Child Labor Committee which recommended that children be allowed to appear on the legitimate stage in Washington also came up for discussion. Mrs. Roosevelt said she felt the law banning children from the stage should be modified; that children should be allowed to appear, provided there were "certain requirements" to safeguard their health and make it possible for them to continue their education.

The First Lady also touched on a problem connected with providing lunches for school children who cannot afford to pay for them. In order to eliminate the line of demarcation between children who can pay and those who cannot, "it should be the obligation of the community to see that there is a free, hot lunch for every child, every day," she said.

In cities a regular school fund for this purpose should be raised, she said. In rural communities, a program can be worked out whereby patrons of the school help to provide the lunches. In this connection she mentioned that such a plan had been carried out successfully in Arthurdale, W. Va.

Defends Special CCC Training

The regulation which prevents men convicted of felonies from serving in the Army or Navy was then discussed, and the First Lady said she was opposed to a "blanket law" either to bar convicts from such service, or to allow them to become soldiers or sailors. She advocated, instead, the consideration of individual cases. Particularly in instances when very young men have been convicted of felony, there might be some chance of their reforming with the years; and in such cases, they might be admitted to Army or Navy service, she said.

So-called "overprivileged CCC camps" do not merit the criticism they have aroused, according to Mrs. Roosevelt. Discussing them briefly, she said that the three camps that had been planned for the purpose of special training for boys with special ability were held to regular requirements of the CCC. She said that there were only 14 college men in the camps and that the life was by no means an easy one.

Father Walsh Assails Soviet 'Appeasement'

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., regent of the Georgetown Foreign School, yesterday attacked this country's "appeasement" of Russia by the lifting of the "moral embargo."

He spoke at the closing session of a three-day Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, at the Mayflower Hotel.

The educator declared:

"It is one of the ironies of the present situation that Russia is being appeased by the lifting of the moral embargo, and that at a moment when appeasers of Germany are being so violently condemned and ridiculed."

He added, "If Soviet Russia is not an aggressor, words have lost their meaning; for then the savage invasion of Finland, the cruel partition of Poland and the slow Bolshevisation of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, are really the liberation of the small democracies from the despotism of liberty."

In a stinging denunciation of Soviet and Left Wing philosophies, Father Walsh declared present day Fascism is the result of Leninist communism, against which it was the reaction.

"The Bolshevik poison spread everywhere by the Communist International since 1919 generated its own anti-toxin in Germany and elsewhere . . . Both Fascism and national socialism were the natural and violent reactions from the Right, against a violent international provocation from the Left," he said.

Earlier delegates approved a series of resolutions designed to help protect American institutions.

Among them were resolutions barring all immigration from any country until "such time as the employment problem in the United States and Territories shall have been solved;" seeking legislation prohibiting strikes in defense industries; commending the work of the Dies Committee to Investigate Un-American Activities and asking for its extension, and calling for the expansion of the American merchant marine.

Youth Commission Urges U. S. School Grant of $100,000,000

Federal aid amounting to $100,000,000 was urged for the Nation's elementary and high schools last night in a report released by the American Youth Commission.

"Since youth is being trained for defense, they should be assisted in they have to defend," Chairman forming a conception of what it is Owen D. Young said.

The financial assistance would be used to relieve present inequality under which some school districts "can spend 100 times as much for education per student as others in more isolated areas."

The report pointed out that the District of Columbia, California, Delaware, Nevada and New York spend annually more than $125 for each pupil, while six states, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and South Carolina, spend less than $40.

"Areas having the highest birth rates and the greatest number of children per thousand adults are characterized by relatively poor schools, meager library facilities, and inadequate provision for medical care," it was stated.

"Rural areas of the Nation, always the population reservoir for the cities, have responsibilities for educating and caring for 31 per cent of the Nation's children of school age, and yet the farmers receive only 9 per cent of the national income."

Much of the Federal aid was asked for programs to improve health, educational and recreational facilities in schools, as well as programs to reduce unemployment and the problems "that face youth of draft age, both in and out of military training camps."

Asserting that it was "fully aware of the dangers of bringing the Federal Government into the field of education," the commission recommended that the aid be given in direct grants, with all control of policies left in the hands of local authorities.

Expenditure of this sum, the report continued, would "greatly change for the better the educational outlook of several million children and youth, of whom at least a half million are not even enrolled in school, and hundreds of thousands attend school only at intervals."

The Weather Man Scores Bullseye

The local weather bureau may be wrong sometimes but at the time yesterdays' forecast was issued it was running at a high rate of efficiency. In fact, it was almost 100 per cent correct.

The forecast for yesterday had been "cloudy and slightly warmer," with a high temperature of 35 degrees and a low of 25. The bureau's records last night showed that Wednesday was cloudy and slightly warmer with the high temperature 37 at 3 p. m. and low 24 at 6:30 p. m.

U. S. Proposes To Build 50 Ships in Year

Maritime Commission plans, published yesterday, call for construction of 50 new ships costing $181,020,000, under the commission's regular long range program, during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, commission chairman, told the House Appropriations Committee that, subject to approval of a budget request for additional contract authorization, the commission expected to contract for 21 additional ships during the remainder of the current year, bringing the total since the program was launched to 200.

The 50-ship program for next year, he said, would include ten vessels for which the operator would bear part of the construction cost, and 40 which the Commission would pay for entirely, later chartering the vessels to operators.

In the first group plans call for five C-3 cargo vessels costing a total of $15,250,000; four special type vessels costing $10,400,000 and a Matson liner to cost $19,500,000.

In the second group were included 10 C-1 cargo ships to cost $20,620,000; 15 C-3 cargo vessels to cost $45,750,000; 6 special type vessels to cost $15,600,000; 8 C-3 passenger cargo ships to cost $34,400,000, and a Matson liner to cost $19,500,000.

Land said the program was flexible, and that it may become desirable to allocate some of the funds to construction of coastwise shipping for private account.

Launchings and deliveries of commission ships are both proceeding at the rate of one a week, he reported.

Cut Requested In District's Pay Roll Toll

A drastic reduction in the local payroll tax was recommended to Congress yesterday by the District unemployment compensation board in its annual report.

Citing an accumulated reserve of $20,000,000, the board stated that the reduction of the tax from 3 to 2.7 per cent last year would not stop the accumulation of a surplus of funds. It recommended no further extension of benefits to employes, and cited concessions made last year.

Another battle between representatives of employers and employes is expected when the House District Committee considers the matter. A long drawn-out fight last year resulted in a set of compromise amendments to the Unemployment Compensation Act.

The board reported that during the calendar year 1940 it had collected $5,763,853 from approximately 175,000 employers and paid out 30,763 claims amounting to $2,090,000.

The reserve fund for the payment of claims now amounts to $19,598,948.

An amendment to the law to protect the benefit rights of persons entering the military or naval service during the present emergency also was recommended by the board.

A new building to house the board and its staff was asked. The report stated that the quarters now occupied at 470 Indiana Avenue are in bad condition and constitute a fire hazard. As a consequence the District building inspector has ordered a rearrangement of office files and furnishings.

Equal Justice—Both Fined

Albert Ceru, of 430 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, was fined $15 in Traffic Court for driving at unreasonable speed. His auto had struck and injured Daniel Whitfield, 40, of 1307 Sixth Street Northwest, at a downtown intersection.

Judge Neilson then fined Whitfield, the pedestrian, $5 for crossing against a red light.

There Always Is a Way

For the next 60 days at least, Samuel Rhodes, 50, will eat three meals, be warm, and have a roof over his head. Rhodes approached Patrolman Leer at Fifteenth and H Streets Northeast and asked to be locked up because he was cold, hungry and homeless. Leer said nothing could be done. Hours later, Rhodes returned. The policeman said he was intoxicated. He got 60 days.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Klutz

Patronage-hungry members of Congress are attempting to inject politics and politicians into the defense program. The House Appropriations Committee yesterday agreed to give President Roosevelt a $100,000,000 "blank check" to provide for defense emergencies, but it attached a highly significant string—suspension of the Civil Service and classification laws. Congress gave the President a $134,000,000 "blank check" last summer with restrictions. The money is sufficient to hire tens of thousands of employes and there's no question the boys on the Hill had their eye on patronage when they knocked out the merit provision.

Members of Congress with long memories will recall that during the World War period the only substantial group of employes who were excluded from a check by the Civil Service Commission were plane inspectors. The hiring of the inspectors resulted in a national scandal. Congress ordered an investigation and Charles Evans Hughes added to his illustrious name by his conduct of the inquiry for Congress.

Patronage is gradually being shut off. The Ramspeck Bill will bring thousands of jobs under merit and nearly all defense jobs are either filled from Civil Service registers, or approved by the commission. War Department has funds which it can use to hire non-Civil Service employes, but Secretary Stimson has ordered his division chiefs to use Civil Service registers whenever possible. All in all, there's been too much reform for the politicians.

The same bill gives the Export-Import Bank $25,000 to hire employes without regard to Civil Service rules . . . The salary of Comptroller General Lindsay Warren is raised from $10,000 to $12,000 by the bill . . . Salaries of ICC and Maritime Commissioners are set at $10,000 each, except Maritime Chairman Land, who'll get $12,000 . . . The committee said it was disturbed by testimony that GAO would need $1,100,000 in relief funds over and above the $10,763,880 approved yesterday. Unless some of the $1,100,000 is voted later on, GAO will be compelled to release some of its present employes . . . FCC received funds to establish two field offices for accounting purposes . . . GAO reported more than 700 Federal employes went down to Florida last winter at Government expense.

Bruce Catton, Newspaper Enterprise Association correspondent, whose Washington column appears in nearly 700 newspapers, will become an assistant to Donald Nelson, defense purchasing chief . . . Two other top-flight newspapermen also are being hired at the Office of Production Management. Stephen Fitzgerald, of the Baltimore Sun, will be assigned to the priorities division, and Tom Wilson will be sent to the production unit. Robert Horton remains as defense information chief.

Hearings on the independent offices bill revealed that the Civil Service Commission estimates that it will make 300,000 appointments during the 1941 fiscal year and the same number during 1942. The commission listed only 100,000 new positions for the 1942 year that begins July 1, but the figure covered only five agencies. They, and the number of new employes estimated for each year, are: War, 50,000; Navy, 43,646; Civil Aeronautics Authority, 6,000; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, 500, and Coast and Geodetic Survey, 179.

The commission estimates that it will have to recruit 150,000 employes during 1942 to replace defense workers who quit. A turn-over rate of 25 per cent is anticipated. Moreover, the commission has to examine ten persons for every one given a job. At that rate 6,000,000 will be tested by the commission during the 1941-42 fiscal years.

Civil Service Commission yesterday shifted some of its confidential files to locked cases . . . Antonia Willard Ford will be the first employe retired from National Archives. Her last day is tomorrow . . . Society of Federal Translators will meet Monday night at the Y. W. C. A. . . . U. F. W. A. executive board will meet here next month to urge Congress to approve the automatic promotion plan . . . Negro Federal employes are forming a recreation association. Herbert Jones, of Postoffice, is chairman; William Murray, Bureau of Engraving, is secretary, and Thompkins G. Ricks, State Department, is assistant secretary.

Tuberculosis Fund Waste Is Charged

Too Much Spent For Administration Of D. C. Society, Says Dr. Coulter

The amount of money spent by the District Tuberculosis Association for salaries and other administrative expenses from funds collected in the annual Christmas seal drive came under sharp attack before the District Medical Society last night.

Spearhead of the attack was Dr. A. Barklie Coulter, director of the tuberculosis bureau of the District Health Department. In milder form, the association president, Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody, participated in the criticism.

Emphasizing that he was speaking as a practicing physician and not as a public health official and qualifying his criticism by asking the society to suspend judgment of the association until a reorganization, instituted by Dr. Peabody, has been completed, Dr. Coulter declared.

"The charity dollar is a public dollar and its use should be purely as an adjunct to that spent in established public agencies.

"Possibly a new association whose interest would be primarily in service and not in salaries could help solve the problem and give you and the public the service to which it is entitled."

Dr. Peabody and Dr. Coulter were speakers at the medical society's regular meeting in its headquarters at 1718 M Street Northwest. Dr. Coulter charged:

That 40 per cent of the association's receipts from seal sales is spent for salaries and other administrative expenses.

That the "cost" of the annual seal sale, "not including a salary of $3,120 to a publicity man" is $21,000.

"Unproductive" Study

"The comparatively insignificant sum of $500 out of a total budget of $55,000 is being spent," Dr. Coulter said of the association, "on what certainly might be called an unproductive high school survey among the athletic groups."

The association's managing director (Mrs. Ernest R. Grant), Dr. Coulter said, receives, "incidentally, $4,500 per year, plus certain perquisites, traveling expenses, etc."

"The charity dollar must be considered as a sacred trust," he declared. "The point I would like to raise is whether or not in the city of Washington it is considered in that light. . . .

"The accounting for this money seems to pass unnoticed. I venture to say that even members of this society are not fully aware of its method of disbursement."

Facts Hard to Get, He Says

Dr. Coulter said that he had tried for years to ascertain how the association's money was spent and was able to collect a "few facts" only after he became a director of the organization. He observed, pointedly, that he was "removed" at the end of a year.

During his year's service, Dr. Coulter said he saw no one on the board "who had even a mild conception of what a scientifically controlled program for tuberculosis consisted of, who tried to justify the actions of the association."

"Possibly the moral obligation . . . was not resognized, and, then again, as between courage and a hot potato, the decision might have been a difficult one."

Feels "New Deal Is in Order"

Dr. Coulter cited that the District's tuberculosis bureau operates on a budget one-half that of the association "and yet is x-raying all cases sent to it by physicians."

Declaring that he feels "a new deal is in order," Dr. Coulter proposed "reallocation" of directorships to give the medical society, the Medico-Chirugical Society and the Health Department control of all purely medical functions of the association.

Dr. Peabody, who on Tuesday announced appointment of a committee, headed by Ross Garrett, Health Security Administration chief, to reorganize the association, disclosed that the association's board is now changing its system of "cost accounting and public reporting" of expenditures and collections.

"Must Steel Ourselves"

"It is easy," Dr. Peabody said, "to allow interest in and appreciation of the efforts of those who are paid workers in our charitable organizations to result in the accumulation of too much pay roll.

"This, we, who are in responsible positions in charitable organizations, must steel ourselves against, as it results, when unchecked, in unfairness to the giver of the charity dollar and impoverishes the results which they have a just right to expect."

Dr. Peabody, pointing out that the reorganization, already under way, is the result of a year's study under his presidency, said it is now impossible to forecast how the shakeup will affect the association's staff.

"Fall on Deaf Ears"

Mrs. Grant, ill at her home with an attack of influenza, was unable to make a statement.

Dr. Frank Walton Burge, Philadelphia expert in problems of tuberculosis control, declared that programs to educate the public "fall on deaf ears," and that early case-finding "is more effective than any amount of talk."

He urged physicians not only to watch expenditure of "charity dollars" in the fight against the disease but to survey their own practice in the search for its victims.

Plaintiff, Testimony Lacking In Lawyer's Case, Papers Show

By John Singerhoff
Post Staff Writer

A Police Court case in which complaining witnesses were not called and no testimony was introduced was revealed by courthouse records yesterday.

The files disclosed that M. Edward Buckley, jr., 33, of 3724 Windom Place Northwest, lawyer, paid a $25 fine last week on a charge of driving on the wrong side of the street. This was final disposition of a drunken-driving charge placed against him last July after his automobile was in a collision with two other cars.

Both motorists who figured in the accident and the policeman who charged Buckley, said yesterday that they were never called to testify in the case nor had they been notified that the charge was changed.

Records show that the attorney was haled into court July 22, accused of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. He had been arrested by Policeman T. L. Roland and W. T. Taff, Second Precinct, at the scene of the accident in the 2100 block Thirteenth Street Northwest.

Pleaded Not Guilty

Buckley pleaded not guilty and demanded a jury trial at the preliminary arraignment. He was released under $500 bail, pending assignment of the case in jury court.

Police records of the accident show that Buckley's car, southbound on Thirteenth Street, struck that of Joseph Lerner, 21, of 4528 Ninth Street Northwest, which was traveling north. Buckley's machine then careened into the automobile of Dorsey J. Griffith, 47, of Cherrydale, Va., track coach at Catholic University, which was parked at the curb.

Lerner estimated that damage to his machine was $150 while Griffith said $15 covered the cost of his repairs.

Griffith and Lerner and the latter's father, Leon Lerner, an occupant of the car, appeared at Police Court the morning after the accident and made written statements of facts to an assistant corporation counsel. They said they were told they would be notified later when to appear for the trial.

Both drivers said yesterday they had never received notification from the court; that they were never called to testify nor did they know that the charge was changed and the case disposed of. Taff, the policeman, said he had not been notified of the change and that "as far as I know Buckley's still on bond."

Taff added that neither he nor his partner, Roland, had ever been called to give evidence in support of the drunken driving charge they placed against the lawyer.

Both Lerner and Griffith said damages to their automobiles had been adjusted by Buckley's insurance company.

Substitute Information Filed

On January 13, more than two months after Quinter's notation was placed on the paper, Buckley appeared before Judge Hobart Newman in jury court. The following rubber-stamped notation was then placed on the paper—"Nolle prosequi in open court, January 13." This appears in addition to Quinters' notation.

On the same day, a substitute information charging Buckley with driving on the wrong side of the street was filed. He pleaded guilty to this charge and the court imposed a $25 fine or in default of the fine 15 days. No witnesses were called to the stand.

Records also show that Buckley was given five days, or until January 18, to pay the fine. The money was put up Janualy 23, according to the docket.

Quinter explained yesterday that he nolle prossed the paper because the "witnesses' statements were very weak." He added also that Buckley had agreed to plead guilty to the lesser charge.

Maj. Brown to Ask For More Police

Maj. Brown has prepared figures showing that during the ten-year period from 1920 to 1930, he received a 40.4 per cent boost in his force, while the population rate increased only 11.3 per cent.

But during the ten-year period from 1930 to 1940, when the District's population jumped 36.2 per cent and traffic problems more than doubled, the Metropolitan Police Department was granted only a 13.9 per cent increase, Maj. Brown will tell the subcommittee.

Today's Capitol Hill hearing on local traffic matters follows adoption of a "do it now" policy to correct conditions which have led to the worst series of traffic tragedies in Washington's history. With the month drawing to an end, 13 persons have been killed since beginning of the new year as against five for the same time in 1940.

In the past, Maj. Brown's pleas for more policemen have fallen on deaf ears of the Commissioners, Budget Bureau and Congress.

The Commissioners already have suggested that at least 50 new officers could be financed through use of the highway fund, and Commissioner J. Russell Young thought "perhaps 100 can be added if we find ways and means of using the highway money."

To hear Maj. Brown's testimony, Representative Schulte has invited two members of the District Subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee to attend today's meeting—Representatives Mahon, chairman, and Stefan, ranking minority member.

But as Maj. Brown prepared his report yesterday, The Post observer watched at several major downtown intersections the manner in which crossing policemen enforced right-of-way laws.

It was found, in general, that officers assigned to regulate traffic at busy corners were prone to overlook flagrant infractions.

Be Afraid Of the Dark, Drivers Told

Two traffic safety bulletins, one entitled "Slow Down When the Sun Goes Down," were read to a packed traffic courtroom yesterday during the daily radio broadcast from that tribunal.

Judge George D. Neilson ordered his clerk to read the bulletins, issued by an insurance company, after announcing they were "of timely interest to all present here and those listening over the air."

"Do you ever buy a sweepstakes ticket?" read Charles Driscoll, the clerk. "You hardly expect to win, do you? But you think you might. When you gamble in lotteries your stake is a few dollars at most, but when you gamble in traffic, you bet your life."

The second bulletin pertained to night driving. It said:

"Deaths from automobile accidents at night have increased 42 per cent during the last few years. In nearly all the reports of night-time accidents, there is evidence that someone was driving faster than his eyes could see, or into darkness that wasn't dispelled by headlamps or highway illumination.

"Human eyes are not like owl eyes. Light rays from headlamps do not bend around curves or over hills.

"The facts urge every driver to slow down when the sun goes down; to have two self-imposed speed limits—one for clear days, a slower one for nights and bad weather. Fear the dark as you do a fog, a snow or a heavy rain."

Takoma Bus Improvement Plan Offered

Transit Company Requests 10-Cent Fare to Finance Better Service

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday requested a straight 10-cent fare for the J-1, J-3 and J-5 Takoma express buses in return for an improved service for residents of Chillum Heights, Petworth and Takoma Park. Patrons would not receive transfer privileges.

In a letter to the Public Utilities Commission, E. D. Merrill, company president, offered a six-point improvement plan contingent on the acceptance of the increased rate for the three Takoma bus lines.

The commission ordered an investigation and gave notice a public hearing would be held before any changes are made.

Six-Point Plan Offered

The six-point improvement program, offered by the company, follows:

Extend the periods of operation of the route J-6 (Takoma-Petworth express bus line) to provide service approximately 18 hours per day every day in the year. This line now provides service only during the off-peak hours on week days, Monday to Saturday inclusive, and does not operate at all on Sundays and holidays.

Extend the periods of operation of the route K-4 (Chillum) and route P-4 (Petworth) express bus lines to provide 18-hour service every day of the year. This line now provides service the same as J-6.

Extend the route of the T-2 (Takoma, Md.) bus line from the District Line to a connection with the Route 72 (Georgia Avenue-Seventh Street car line) at Fourth and Butternut Streets, via Carroll Avenue, thus providing in effect, an extension of the Georgia Avenue car line to the District Line and making the Georgia Avenue car line available to Maryland patrons with one transfer.

Would Move Express Limits

Move the express limits of routes J-6, P-4 and K-4 from New Hampshire Avenue and Park Road to Grant Circle northside.

Discontinue operation of route P-2 and route K-2 (Petworth and Chillum locals). Patronage of these lines between points east of Georgia Avenue and points along Sixteenth Street, it was said, no longer justifies continuance of service, with the services of the remaining lines available.

Designate routes J-6, K-4 and P-4 as "Limited Stop' lines. This type of service provides, within certain designated areas, for stops only for alighting passengers when bound downtown and only for boarding passengers when outbound.

The straight 10-cent fare, which would be charged only on the three Takoma express lines, was abandoned some years ago when the old streetcar companies merged into the present Capital Transit Co. Merrill said "where such a preferential service is given," those taking advantage of it should pay a fare that would at least approach the point of paying for the cost of that service. He said the experience of several years in this type of operation has shown this to be impossible at the regular rates of fare. The J-1 Takoma line goes to the downtown via Thirteenth Street; J-3 via Ninth Street, and J-5 via Third Street and Thirteenth Street.

Feeder Line Ordered

An improved transit service for residents of East Washington, including a new feeder bus line and a transfer arrangement between the Capital Transit Co. and a suburban line, was ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

Both improvements will be placed on a six-month trial period, the feeder bus beginning March 2 and the transfer agreement on February 24.

Northeast residents in the area north of Benning Road and east of Minnesota Avenue will benefit by the new feeder line which will connect with the Seat Pleasant, Kenilworth and Benning street car lines.

After more than a half-year of consideration the commission has finally approved a transfer arrangement between the local transit company and the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis Motor Lines for the benefit of residents in Southeast Washington.

Express Continued

The new agreement, which has been approved by the two companies, provides this program:

The suburban bus express service from District areas east of the Anacostia River to Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest will be continued at the present fare of 10 cents.

Residents in the District who board the suburban line will be required to pay 2 cents for a transfer to the Capital Transit lines. The transfer, however, will be acceptable only at Barney Circle; Minnesota and Pennsylvania Avenues Southeast and Pennsylvania and Branch Avenues Southeast. Regular fare is 10 cents or the street car token.

The W. M. & A. will sell and accept tokens similar to those used by the Capital Transit Company on their Seat Pleasant, Suitland and Silver Hill lines.

Drury Stresses Conservation Duty of Parks

His Policy of Unity Within Recommended To U. S. in Crisis Now

Our national parks have been the custodians of natural resources and natural conditions that made America great, Newton B. Drury, newly elected president of the National Park Service, last night told more than 300 park supervisors and service executives from all parts of the country.

Drury spoke at the annual conservation dinner at the Washington Hotel by the American Planning and Civic Association, given in his honor.

He called the first task of directors of national parks that of striking the right balance between efficient use of the parks by the public and conservation of park resources for future generations.

Frederick A. Delano, director of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission and chairman of the association, who presided, recalled the progress made in the national park system during the 32-year history of the association.

Honored guests included Jesse C. Nichols, Dr. Horace McFarland, Earle S. Draper, John V. Hansen—who later presented color films of national parks he had taken—Dr. Harry Slack and Mrs. S. Herbert Hare.

Ohio State Society members danced at the Kennedy Warren last night to celebrate the ninety-eighth anniversary of President McKinley's birth.

The dance followed a business meeting in which Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, president of the society, said, with a broad smile, that President McKinley was "one of the great Ohio Presidents who knew how to run the Government of the United States, I might say, as Ohioans always have and always will."

His remark drew a laugh, but a moment later Senator Burton (Republican), of Ohio, in a tribute to the Spanish American War President's career, said that the Nation now could do well to follow the lesson of McKinley whose central policy he described as "unity within." Burton said that American foreign policy should not go beyond the point where all groups are united, and later he said he believed the lease-lend bill goes beyond that point.

Representative Secrest (Democrat), of Ohio, was named chairman of a committee to nominate officers for election at the March meeting. Twenty-four new members were admitted. The group of more than 200 members and guests held a dance following the business meeting.

Other members of the nominating committee were E. A. Drake, Staley Griest, Miss Edna Miller, Mrs. S. J. Hess, Ralph Dewey and Mrs. Howard Mathews.

New members were Miss E. Louise Johnson, Helen Kapsams, A. D. Baumhart, jr., Miss Elizabeth Jane Tumblesson, Miss Mary Turner, Mrs. Edna Parker Jacobsen, Mr. and Mrs. Allen B. Plank, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. Warren H. Redpath, Paul R. Ashbrook, Lucille and Robert E. Babcock, Commander T. J. Bay, U. S. N.; Ruth M. Cornman, Miss E. Agnes Dillon, Richard J. Hubbell, Mr. and Mrs. H. Carroll Phillips, Miss Betty Jane Lawrence, Mary Jane Burns Russell, Michael B. Stanko and Mr. and Mrs. Russell Mebs.

Forms for Making Returns

Forms for filing returns of income for 1941 have been sent to persons who filed returns last year. Failure to receive a form, however, does not relieve a taxpayer of his obligation to file his return and pay the tax on time—on or before March 15 if the return is made on the calendar year basis, as is the case with most individuals.

Forms may be obtained upon request, written or personal, from the offices of collectors and from deputy collectors of internal revenue in the larger cities and towns. A person whose gross income for 1940 was derived from salary, wages, dividends, interest and annuities, and was not in excess of $5,000, should make his return on Form 1040-A. A person whose gross income was in excess of $5,000 or, regardless of amount, was derived from a business, profession, rents, or sale of property is required to use Form 1040. Failure to use the proper form presents difficulties to both the taxpayer and the Bureau of International Revenue. Therefore, it is emphasized that a taxpayer who is liable for a return and is engaged in a business or profession is required to use Form 1040.

The return must be filed with the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer has his legal residence or principal place of business on or before midnight of March 15, 1941. The tax may be paid in full at the time of filing the return or in four equal installments, due on or before March 15, June 15, September 15 and December 15.

2 D. C. Registrants Plead Scruples Against Warfare

Two Washington Selective Service registrants have appealed their class 1-A (immediately available for service) classifications on the grounds of conscientious objection to the military training program.

Both the men have passed physical examinations, and otherwise qualified for a call to the colors, save for their scruples against service.

Should their appeals fail, one of the youths who objects merely to combatant service will be inducted but will be sent to some noncombatant Army branch such as the Medical Corps. The other, who has protested against any military duty whatever, will be assigned to one of the works camps to be opened soon in seven States—probably the camp at Patapsco State Park, near Baltimore.

Bandit Offers Apology but Takes $9 Anyway

The paper-bag bandit, absent for the last three weeks, showed up again last night, this time at High's Ice Cream Store, 1213 Fourth Street Southwest, and for the first time he broke his silence.

Customarily, on appearing in a store, he quietly produces a piece of bag paper on which is scrawled "This Is a Holdup." He followed style last night, and then in the way of apology, said to the clerk, Martha Robeson, 42, "I hate to do this lady, but my boss is across the street."

For the speech, the unique culprit collected $9.00, and then calmly sauntered off—down Fourth Street.

4,500 See Hoyas Come From Behind

Hilltoppers Forced 'All Out' for 11th Straight; Schmidli Takes Hero's Role

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Georgetown's 11-game winning streak received its supreme test last night as the Hoyas brought out their best brand of pressure ball to hand Penn State a 28-24 defeat in an overtime thriller at Riverside Stadium.

More than 4,500 fans, including Movie Star Kay Aldridge, watched the Hoyas pull out of a 19-12 deficit to put on the season's greatest rally with Charley Schmidli and Jim Kiernan in the heros' role.

Th famed sliding zone defense of the Nittany Lions, that stopped N. Y. U.'s winning streak three weeks ago, baffled the bewildered Hoyas for three periods but in the last quarter and the extra period Georgetown broke through and pulled out of a game that looked hopelessly lost.

Ten-Minute Quarters

The game was played in ten-minute quarters instead of the conventional 20-minute halves, by mutual agreement.

Trailing by seven points entering the fourth ten-minute period, missing easy shots, handing Penn State the ball on simple passes and looking the opposite of a team that had won ten in a row, Georgetown suddenly came to life.

Jim Kiernan tossed in a pot shot that made it 19-14 and at the halfway mark of the period he calmly stepped to the foul line and chucked in a pair of one-pointers. The Hoya rooters were wild by this time and then Kiernan, running full speed, tossed in a one-hander that brought the score to a 19-18. Capt. John Parr, of the Visitors, made it 20-18 with his first foul conversion in four tries but Bill Bornheimer replied with a field goal, sneaking under the basket and unguarded, tapping the ball in for two precious tying points.

The Hoyas took time out here with 62 seconds to play but the desperate scoring attempts of both teams missed their mark and forced the game into a five-minute extra period.

Bornheimer slipped under the basket early in the overtime session for a snowbird to put Georgetown in the lead for the first time since early in the game. Here Charley Schmidli, the wild-eyed sophomore, caged a 1-point pot shot for a 4-point lead that just about raised the roof.

Dick Grimes and Elmer Gross aided the Penn State cause with foul shots, O'Grady put the Hoyas four points ahead with a long field goal, but Gross caught G. U. offguard and cut the lead to two points.

Here Schmidli stepped in at another crucial spot and from midcourt swished a field goal that clinched one of the most precious basketball victories in Georgetown's history.

Barr Shines

The Georgetown spurt was certainly overdue. For the first five minutes of each of the first three periods they failed to score a point. A comeback late in the initial quarter gave them an 8-4 lead but Penn State was ahead, 12-11, at halftime and 19-12 at the end of the third quarter as Georgetown's lone scoring contribution in ten minutes was a foul shot by Bill Bornheimer.

John Barr, 6-foot, 200-pound captain and leading scorer of the Penn Staters, kept them in the ball game with 13 points. Barr, who was named to the All-Madison Square Garden team last year, was the best-looking visiting courtman to show here this season. He did everything right and on offense and defense eopped individual honors.

Captain Irving Rizzi and Buddy O'Grady, a bit groggy for three periods, played prominent parts in Georgetown's rally and each played the entire 45 minutes.

Hoya Freshman Victorious

Georgetown and Catholic University freshmen teams resumed athletic relations between the schools in a preliminary, a game that is expected to lead to a varsity tilt in the future. Georgetown won, 43-25.

Paced by Center Benny Reiges, the Hoyas doubled the score on the Cardinal frosh at the half, 16-8, and had things their own way throughout the final periods. The victory gave Georgetown the edge in the series with local freshmen teams, having beaten Maryland and C. U. and lost to G. W.

Marion Miley Golf Winner In Florida

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 29.—Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., sounded warning to all comers today she is "on her game," as she defeated Louise Suggs, 17-year-old Lithia Springs, Ga., sharpshooter, 3 and 2 in the quarterfinals of the Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament.

Miss Suggs, who had won two winter tournaments, was no match for the more experienced Kentuckian who scored a par 38 going out with deadly putting. Miss Suggs in the morning round had eliminated Mrs. Mortimer May, of Miami Beach, 3 and 2.

Miss Grace Amory, socialite golfer, of Palm Beach, won her way into the semi-finals with a 2 up quarter final victory over Miss Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, after an earlier 5-and-4 win over Miss Janet Younger, of Elmsford, N. Y.

Miss Hicks Comes From Behind

Miss Miley meets Miss Amory in the semifinals.

Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., the medalist, escaped Miss Suggs' fate only by coming from behind twice today. Miss Hicks managed to turn back a surprise challenger, young Nancy McClave, of Maplewood, N. J., in a rousing 22-hole match this afternoon. Earlier Miss Hicks had rallied to beat Mrs. Leon Soloman, of Memphis, Tenn., 2 and 1.

Miss Hicks will play Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 1 up conqueror of Atlanta's Dorothy Kirby, in the other half of the semifinals.

Miss Cothran, 1940 National runnerup, had a nip-and-tuck tussle with Miss Kirby but won with superior putting.

In the other second-round matches, Miss Gardner defeated Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington, in 19 holes; Miss McClave ousted Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Washington, 4 and 3, and Miss Miley conquered Mrs. T. E. Schluderburg, of Baltimore, 8 and 6.

Matt McGrath, Olympic Star, Passes Away in New York

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—"Mighty Matt," the cop who came out of Tipperary at the turn of the century to become one of the greatest Olympic athletes of all time, died today.

On the records he was Police Inspector Matthew J. McGrath, 64, weight between 225 and 250, winner of 21 national championships in weight-throwing. To the little Chinese orphan boy he adopted several years ago he was an Olympic god. To vicious criminals he was "the law." To sports followers he was "Mighty Matt" who could throw the ball and hammer like most of us would toss a football.

At 21, he marched on New York City in all his green glory. Let him tell it:

"I hadn't been here a week when I wandered into Central Park and, being a greenhorn, I didn't know that I was in a park. I thought I was in the country, so I took off my shoes and began to toss some rocks around.

Swam in Lake

"After a while I went for a swim in the lake. A mounted policeman rode up, wagging his head, and he said, 'Man, it's clear I've got to arrest ye. Ye've broken every park ordinance there is, and that's too much.'"

Matt wasn't arrested. Instead he put on a uniform and went to work.

In 1913, he won a citation for subduing a killer who had taken refuge on a river barge. McGrath hid behind a pile of bricks on the pier and flung a deadly rain of them at the armed man until the criminal threw his gun into the river and surrendered.

Another time he got a medal for diving into the Harlem river on a winter night to rescue a would-be suicide.

For a quarter of a century he led the world in hurling the hammer and heaving the 56-pound weight. He competed in four Olympics, 1908-12-16-28, won both events in 1912, and his American record for the 56-pound event, made in Canada in 1911, of 40 feet 6⅝ inches, remains unbeaten.

He was head of the traffic force in Manhattan. To keep in shape he went through calisthenics before an open window each morning in his Bronx home and until pneumonia set in, he threw the hammer regularly on Sundays.

Snead's card was 66. He and Barry Goldwater, Phoenix amateur, had a best ball score of 63 to finish in front of the field in the special event.

Lead Changes Hands 18 Times in Game; 29 Fouls Called At West Point

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 29.—In a wild and wooly game that saw the lead change hands 18 times, Virginia's touring basketball team beat Army today 40-36.

The Southerners were in front 18 to 16 at half time, but Army rallied at the start of the second half to lead by five points. Virginia, paced by Billy McCann, who tallied 17 points, overcame the margin late in the period.

Two field goals by Paul Kemp and one each by Capt. Dick Reinbold and Ray Murphy sent the West Pointers ahead 24 to 19 with but four minutes of the second half gone.

Virginia gradually sliced Army's lead and with four minutes to go McCann tied the game up at 34-all with a side-court shot. Bill Preston's field goal and a foul shot by Buchanan sent Virginia further ahead.

Jack Dempsey Is Worrying Louis Camp

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 29.—Jack Dempsey is better known around and about for his "sock-o-logy" than his psychology.

But, as "Dr. Jack," he has applied to Friday night's heavyweight title tussle between Red Burman and Joe Louis a distinct master-minding touch which has the Bomber's fistic family at least a little upset, if not downright worried.

Everyone has been telling Louis' handlers for weeks that Red doesn't stand a chance in there against the champion's big guns; that Joe probably can name the round and the punch. Yet, the Bomber's brain trust has asked, on more than one occasion, "what will Dempsey pull?"

They know that the old Manassa Mauler won't be in the ring Friday, that the Baltimore redhead is strictly on his own once that bell rings. They also know, however, that for the last couple of years Jack has been roaming up and down the country telling one and all Louis is a good fighter, but "there's a definite weakness in his style." They wonder, as a result, if, by some chance, Jack may have something up his sleeve which will turn his 10 to 1 shot protege, Burman, into the surprise package to end all surprise packages.

"He can't take a punch around the head," Jack insisted. "Schmeling knocked him out, Galento had him groggy and Braddock and Jorge Brescia had him on the floor.

"Any style of attack that is at all unusual mixes Joe up. Well, Burman has a crouching, weaving style and has learned a couple of things about throwing hooks to the body out of a crouch. He's also a dead game fella. I won't say he's a cinch to win, but he's got more than a chance.

"Sure, we're trying to worry the Louis crowd. We've got to try every angle we can think of. When you're up against a guy like the champ, who is a great puncher, you've got to fight fire with fire."

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

By Ben Bane Dulaney

Post Sports Editor

The census figures have already told you that Washington is the eleventh largest city in the United States, that the embarrassing question askers last spring came up with 663,143 names. The figures didn't, of course, include the metropolitan area—those immediate and thoroughly suburban counties in Maryland and Virginia which push the tally far over the million mark.

DULANEY

Washington has little foreign commerce, little manufacturing. We're a city of office workers who like to be amused after hours. We're a city of high per capita wealth, a city which can afford to buy the implements of assorted sports and pay the boxoffice fees to watch other assorted sports.

We're a super-cosmopolitan city. These office workers stem from Idaho and Mexico and Maine and South Carolina. They come from Italy and Finland and Minnesota and Guam. They migrate from Utah and Louisiana and Oregon and Panama.

That's why we have more than 70 competitive sports around us.

Sports page headlines mostly tell about baseball and football and golf and basketball and tennis and horse racing. Boxing, wrestling, ice hockey. These are the mass production sports, the ones that draw throngs, create traffic problems, make or lose huge sums for impresarios.

But there are so many more: Sports to look at and sports to participate in. Sports that most of us neither know nor care about, that don't get much space in the papers. But sports that have small but fanatical followings and are pretty important to a Nation which is endeavoring to keep its youngsters under 70 in shape.

We've named nine major sports. Here's a haphazard list of some 60 more all of which can be found in what the advertising boys call the shopping area of Washington. Even if you have Marco Polo Haight's bay window or a combination of yellow jaundice and pernicious anemia you can find something here that you'll be able to do.

Look:

Shuffleboard. Table tennis. Bowling. Duckpins. Billiards and all the other pool table games. Horseshoe pitching. Trapshooting. Skeet (and don't get traps and skeet mixed or you'll get both camps on your neck). Miniature golf (at least three courses here after the craze foundered and died). Golf driving. Motorcycle racing and midget auto racing and bicycle racing. Roller skate racing and polo and roller polo and water polo.

Swimming and diving. Skiing (at least there's a ski club here). Ice skating for speed and exactitude. Badminton. Archery. Outboard racing and sailboat racing and yacht racing and miniature boat racing on the Reflection Pool. Fly casting. Fishing and crabbing and oystering and clamming. Handball. Squash. Swimming. Marble shooting. Cricket. Rugby. Softball. Touch football. Soccer. Field hockey. Weight lifting and volley ball and fieldball and lacrosse. Gymnastics. Cross-country and marathon racing. Horse shows. Hunt racing. Fox hunting. Hunting with dog and gun. Pistol shooting and rifle shooting. Canoe racing and tilting. Jousting (ask anyone from southern Maryland). Cockfighting (ask any good friend from southern Maryland). Muskrat skinning (they had a contest on the Eastern Shore yesterday and pretty near ruined a movie theater.

And we aren't through. Try pigeon racing and model plane contests and croquet and dog shows and hunter trials and gliding and soaring and boucci and airplane spot landing contests. Try jiu jitsu and aquaplaning and fencing and mumblety-peg.

Our definition of "sport" is an endeavor in which there is an element of competition and in which the contestants are able to raise a sweat. Conceivably, then, we could throw in crap shooting, bridge, parlor games in general and even chess. But chess is probably the end. The prosecution rests.

A Modern (250 Lb.) Marco Polo:

Haight Goes South

(Editor's note—Any reference herein to poetry, verse, rhyme or prose, living or dead, certainly is coincidental.)

Miami, Fla.

Dear Boss:
Big Joe Holman would do it so
He wrote a book and made some dough
And Faino Haight might do worse
Than try to write this one in verse
I played that horse, we hear them say
He made two eights the old hard way
He drank three Zombies right on down
And made every night club in town
We hear the golfers lie like mad
About long, straight drives they had Enjoyable meal, she'll relate
He pays the bill, ten bucks a plate
There's shuffleboard and domino
Slot machines, dogs and bingo
There's swimming if you get the notion
Or you just sit and watch the ocean
Shops and bars, there's parks galore
Millions of games and many more
But it's catching grouper and the bass
That's the No. 1 lure for the mass
(And if that statement isn't class
Well, Boss, then I'll just pass)

As you probably have seen by by now
This letter is going to be a wow.
A stab at rhyme, a shot at reason
About Miami's big fishing season.
If you would a sailfishing go
It'll cost you 25 bucks or so.
They take you far out to sea
You get a strike and howl with glee.
You try hard that fish to catch
He proves more than your match.
The captain gr os your tackle
He lands the fish and you cackle.

But just remember, happy one
Your money worries have just begun
Five feet, ten inches over all
Just fits the dining room wall
For a bankroll as big as your fist
You can hire a taxidermist
He'll paint him up and wire him down
You'll be the hero in your hometown
You can swell up, almost burst with pride
And let the neighbors feel his hide
But if the chips get low, you've not a sou
The bills ain't paid and the rent is due
And they move your furniture out in the street
Remember that sailfish ain't good to eat
Sailfishing's expensive, you'll admit
And there's lots of folks who go for it
But if you haven't got the dough
You can fish at two bucks a throw
Sort of community pisterical affair
Everybody gets a line and soft chair
Two sharpened hooks and a lead weight
You buy the ticket, they furnish the bait
The boat leaves at ten, gets back at five
The captain will bring you back alive
But almost every trip it's an even bet
That somebody's stomach will be upset

The boat rolls this way, it rolls that
And everybody uses the ocean for a hat.
A man at the stern brings one to gaff
A red belly and long silvery tail
You don't see it, you're on the rail.
Captain, Captain, take me to shore
I just can't stand this any more.

Official Criticizes Grid Recruiting Frauds

Mike Connor, Ex-Governor Cites Methods

Southeastern Body's Commissioner Hits Practices of Some College Officials

By the Associated Press

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 29.—The Southeastern Conference's athletic commissioner, Mike Conner, believes "just criticism" of college football comes from "deceitful and fraudulent" recruiting.

Addressing University of Mississippi alumni and officials at a dinner, the former Governor this State commended conference members for showing "wisdom and courage" in legalizing athletic scholarships, but scored some methods he said had been used by talent scouts.

Game Undervalued

"Many of the critics today are contending football is overemphasized," he said. "That is not the trouble. I maintain college football is undervalued."

Conner said a survey had shown 90 per cent of the holders of Southeastern Conference athletic scholarships came "from humble homes and poor parents," and could not otherwise have had the education.

"The just criticism," Conner declared, "comes from the deceit and fraudulent practices that in some instances have ranged from college presidents down to janitors. It has saturated the game."

He charged some institutions had given boys actual cash, found jobs for the youths' parents, then required players to "sign on their word of honor" that they had "not been given special inducements."

He told of a Florida high school star taken to every game a certain college played during last football season by one of the college's scouts.

"One week during practice," Conner said, "this chap told the coach he would have to move a scheduled game up to Thursday night so the player could make a Saturday college game. The coach was sap enough to do it."

"Legal" Scholarships

Under Conner's supervision, Southeastern Conference schools have agreed to forego competitive bidding for athletes—except insofar as they may stress such things as the educational merits of their respective institutions—and to limit inducements to the "legal" scholarships.

Scholarships are standardized, providing tuition, board, books, laundry, medical services and the privilege of earning a maximum of $10 per month at a legitimate job.

Green Hornet In Featured Wrestling Spot

The Green Hornet, who might be mistaken for a left-over from the 1940 Halloween parade, moves into his first headline wrestling role tonight at Turner's Arena, where he will tackle "Gentleman Lou" Plummer, the Baltimore villain.

Having won three matches and been disqualified in another, the Hornet is biding for a permanent top spot, and hopes the eclipse the reign of terror enjoyed by another masked grappler, the Golden Terror, who has disappeared from the local picture.

Plummer claims to be an expert in wrestling masked grapplers. He had two exciting engagements with the Golden Terror and has met on various occasions the Phantom, the Shadow and a couple of masked wrestlers.

In the semiwindup Ivan Managoff will oppose Paul Boasch. Bockwinkle will meet Chris Zaharias. Eddie Newman will commit mayhem with the huge scissors master, Fred Grobmier, and Dick Stahl, newcomer from Wisconsin, will fire at Joe DeValteau, French refugee grappler. Action at 8:30.

Willie Hoppe Wins Second Cue Match

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Champion Willie Hoppe, whose defense of his world three-cushion billiard crown was delayed 16 days by illness, polished off his second straight foe tonight in his drive to catch the field.

Len Kenney, of Chicago, was the victim in 36 innings, 50 to 12. The time was 55 minutes, five more than Hoppe required in winning his opener last night.

Hoppe encountered difficulty in making early headway, but finished fast. Leading, 18 to 9, in the twenty-sixth inning, he connected for 30 points in the next eight innings, finally running out with one billiard in each of the thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth frames.

Kenney's total was three short of the total Herb Peterson, of St. Louis, scored in his effort last night.

Hoppe had a high run of seven and thrice put together clusters of six.

Sterling, Terp Freshman, Aims to Follow In Brother Jim's Footsteps; Two Boys Physically Alike; Jim Now a Teacher

By Jack Munhall

The name of Kehoe, brightest gem in University of Maryland's bejeweled track annals, now is being perpetrated by a pair of lanky, angular-faced youngsters who may go down in history as the greatest brother act of the cinder boards.

Jim Kehoe, the flawless running machine, who first placed the family name in the track spotlight, graduated from Maryland last June unbeaten in dual meets in three years and taking with him a hatful of Southern Conference, South Atlantic and District A. A. U. records for the half-mile, 1 mile and 2 miles. Into the independent ranks he went, representing the Washington A. A., and immediately established himself as one of the three best 880 and 1,000 meters runners in the country, all the time bringing new fame to Maryland.

Still Maryland was not long to be without a student Kehoe, for scarcely had Jim shaken the dust of College Park from his heels than up came Sterling Kehoe with the finest middle-distance record in Eastern high schools to enroll in the freshman class. Greatest miler prospect in years is what they say of Sterling out College Park way, where only last year Mason Chronister was cracking mile records in wholesale numbers.

Brothers Are Alike

Strikingly similar are the brothers Kehoe physically and also in their scholastic track accomplishments. Jim, 23, stands 6 feet 1½ inches, weighs 145 pounds. Sterling, 19, stretches 1 inch above the 6-foot mark, weighs the same. In facial appearance they are much alike, with oblong-shaped heads, prominent noses, deep-set eyes and closely cropped hair.

Both attended Bel Air High, where their earliest track training was in the hands of one of the most successful of all scholastic coaches, Dr. Bird P. Hopkins. At Bel Air Jim used to average about 1:59 or 2 minutes even for the half mile. Likewise, Sterling, who in some 24 half-mile and mile starts for Bel Air, was beaten only once, by Jack Milne, the North Carolina freshman ace who then was at Mercersburg.

At 1,000 yards Jim, as a scholastic, had a marked edge on brother Sterling, his best time for the distance being about 2:12, while Sterling's tops for the race was approximately 2:16. But in the schoolboy mile they ran as close as 12 o'clock, both consistently clocked at 3:35.

Sterling, who is well-known in these parts because of his victories in the Penn relays and in the annual field day events at Maryland, is considered by Maryland Coach Geary (Swede) Eppley as the ideal type for a crack miler.

Handles Self Well

"I like the kid's deep chest and the way he handles himself," "Swede" was saying yesterday as he conjectured up visions of Sterling developing into the much-discussed four-minute miler.

However, don't be misled into believing Eppley is building castles in the air insofar as Sterling is concerned, for the cagey Terrapin mentor is too experienced to go out on the limb for a freshman runner.

"You can't tell a thing about kids that age," he says.

Jim Kehoe, who is making his living as a history teacher at Mount Rainier high school where he also coaches and unbeaten jayvee basketball team, has made rapid strides in the track world since leaving Maryland. Appearing in all the major indoor meets of the year, Jim has beaten every outstanding 880 and 1,000 meters runner in competition except Campbell Kane, Indiana's national collegiate half-mile titleholder.

"That fellow is really my jinx," Jim said yesterday as he went through his daily workout with the Maryland track squad and helped condition brother Sterling. "In four races this year he has beaten me four times and three of the times she set new records. Those same three races I broke the old mark, too.

"Don't know just how to run that fellow. If I set the pace, as I usually do, he outlasts me, and when I allow him to set the pace he "outkicks" me in the stretch. And all the time I have to worry about Beetham, Borican and Woodruff who are right on my heels."

Saturday night in the Millrose games at Madison Square Garden Jim will get another crack at the powerfully built Kane as he opens a strenuous weekend schedule. Together with Beetham, the national half-mile champion, they will meet at 8 o'clock. Just two hours later Jim, surprisingly enduring for his frailness, will run the 1,000 meters against a crack field, including Borican and Gene Venske, the indoor record holder for the event.

American U. Host Tonight To Penn State

American University's basketball team, idle since January 9, returns to action tonight in its feature home attraction of the season with Penn State's Nittany Lions.

Game time is 7:30 p. m., an hour earlier than usual, so the fans may get to the various hotels for the President's Birth'ay Balls. There will be no preliminary but dancing will follow the game in the gymnasium.

The Eagles and thee Lions will doubtless put on a battle of zone defenses with the sliding zone of the strong State College team against the standard zone of staff Cassell's Eagles.

Heavy favorites judging by the records, the visitors may be pressed to the limit if A. U. Capt. Dutch Schulze, leading the District scorers with a 14-point average, should develop a hot hand. For when Dutch starts throwing them in his mates usually roll up the points with him.

The Eagles have won only two out of six contests thus far but they have a potentially strong club and may snap back against the favored Penn Staters. Victor over Penn Military and Elizabethtown Teachers, American has lost to Georgetown by only six points, Western Maryland, by a point; Delaware, in the last two minutes, and Dickinson.

Wilson, Gallaudet, Maryland Active

Coach Burt Shipley will send his University of Maryland cagers through a short workout today preparatory to leaving for Richmond tomorrow morning for a pair of week-end Southern Conference tests.

The Spiders, losers only to George Washington and Virginia thus far this season and already a 14-point victor over Maryland, will entertain the Terps tomorrow night while Maryland will be an underdog for the eleventh time this season Saturday night against Duke, at Durham.

Gallaudet and Wilson College fives are ready for tomorrow night's intra-city clash, the second of the season, in the Wilson gym. Doc White's Owls defeated the Blues, 87-50, in a previous engagement, but Coach Blair Smith's club has won three out of its last four games and is hoping for an upset.

Wilson, which has won seven out of ten contests this season, travels to Blue Ridge Saturday night.

Landon Prep Five Defeats Gilman, 32-17

Landon Prep School's surprisingly strong basketball team won its sixth game in eight starts yesterday, trouncing the Gilman School of Baltimore, 32-17, on the Landon court.

It was the first court game between the old rivals in three years.

Lead at Halftime

The local prep school team was never in trouble, jumping into a 22-6 lead at halftime and using 11 players in maintaining the edge in the latter periods.

Paul Baker's 14 points nearly equaled the total of the Gilman team while Chuck Boteler dropped in four field goals for the winners.

Long Island, R. I. State Win Garden Games

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 29.—Rhode Island State basketball's two-point-a-minute scoring wonders more than lived up to their reputation tonight by swamping St. Francis, of Brooklyn, 57-42, in the opening game of an intersectional double-header before 16,000 fans in Madison Square Garden.

Winners of the New England conference title for the last four years during which they lost only one in 40 contests, Rhode Island ran riot in the first half to mark up a 42-28 margin at the midway point, a new Garden half-time total for a single quintet and a new Garden two-team total.

Losers In Rally

The pace slowed down in the second half and St. Francis held Rhode Island pointless for eight minutes while staging a spirited drive that brought them to within five points of the New England quintet.

Long Island University defeated Butler, 46 to 35, in the second game. The Blackbirds went out and took a 30-15 half time lead. They were never seriously threatened or headed thereafter.

King Honored

Dolly King, the Blackbirds' great colored star, was presented with a trophy by the Long Island student body just before the game—last of his varsity career, and then proceeded to become the high scorer of the game with 19 points.

Eastern Five Victor Over Presidents

Eastern High School cagers won their tenth game in 12 starts yesterday by beating George Washington High School, of Alexandria, 30 to 22, on the Eastern court.

The home club took an early lead and at halftime held a 17 to 5 margin. In the second half Coach Phil Fox of Eastern inserted his reserves and they played all but the last three minutes of the half.

Moe Schulman and R. Poston tallied 7 points apiece and Neil Craig played a polished floor game for the winners. For G. W. High Forward Crump showed to best advantage.

Episcopal Beats Tech Five, 39-31

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 29.—The Episcopal High School quintet recorded its third major victory of the season and its fourth triumph in six starts today by upsetting a favored McKinley Tech quintet, 39-31, in a spirited contest before about 350 fans. The Maroons led all the way, but were forced to check a desperate rally by the opposition to pull through with a victory.

Tom Hamill, Lucien Burnett and Dick West collaborated in a scoring spree that netted the victory for the Maroons midway of the third quarter. After leading 10-6 at the end of the first quarter and 20-14 at the half, the Alexandrians rang up 12 points, while limiting the Manual Trainers to 4, to increase their advantage to 32-18 at the three-quarter mark.

Whistle Checks Rally

Jackie Walsh, the District's leading schoolboy scorer, sparked a hot Tech comeback that saw the visitors outscore their hosts, 13-7, in the final period, but the timekeeper's whistle halted hostilities before the Techmen could offset the Maroon's early margin.

The nearest the visitors came to victory was in the second quarter, when Episcopal's margin was cut to two points at 16-14, but the Maroons came back and held their opponents scoreless for the remainder of the period while adding four points to their own total.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.—Hank Danning, who is considerably more important to the Giants than the Messrs. Stoneham, Terry, Hubbell and Ott combined, is a holdout for two reasons. No. 1 is the dough, of course. "It always is," Hank told us in his sincere, intelligent way, as we sat together at breakfast today. "They offered me the same money I made last year. I can't say what it was, but I can say that it doesn't make sense. I caught 140 games last season. I caught every game except one for four straight months. I'm not a popoff guy, but I know my hitting kept the team up there where it was for a half a season.

CONSIDINE

"Maybe it's hard for the average fan to understand, but a ball player who does what I've done looks for a raise. He knows that if he doesn't get it when he's hot he never will get it—and in a few years he'll be looking for some other kind of work. A ball player wants financial recognition. If he has a good season he wants it to show on his next contract, even if it's only a $500 raise.

"The other reason why I sent back my contract unsigned is that they've inserted a new clause in National League contracts this year. Mine was pasted on the regular form. It runs something like this: 'The ball club is to have jurisdiction over a player during his off season, too, and he must follow its instructions for the good of the National League and the good of the national game.' Hell, that could mean anything. I know too many lawyers to sign a thing like that."

Hank loves baseball, but it doesn't cloud his inborn realism. "If I had my life to live over again I'm not sure I'd be a ball player," he said. "Whether you make good, or make any money after you do make good, depends so darn much on luck. It gets a little nerve-wracking when you're not getting the breaks, or the hits, and you know that sooner or later you're going to be washed up and forced to tell the guy you're asking for a job that you don't know how to do a thing except play ball.

"I almost quit in 1936," Hank recalled. "I was sitting on the bench, day after day and month after month. Terry wouldn't trade me. And he wouldn't put me in there, for Mancuso was going pretty good. Finally I figured that it would be better to get into some other business, when I was young enough to learn it. I told Terry and he said, 'I think you're foolish.' Finally, he gave be a break, but he was forced to do it because Mancuso broke a finger. What I'm saying is that a ball player's life depends on crazy things like that. A lot of capable guys never get the break. How many young catchers made good with the Cubs or the Athletics or the Yanks—with Hartnett, Cochran and Dickey around?"

Danning's sister is a lawyer here and for a time Hank wanted to be one. "It would have taken me about 30 years, trying to squeeze it in while playing ball," he chuckled. "I looked around for a long time for a profession or business before I began buying a little property. Now I've got a flat, two homes and a small store building with a gas station attached. Keeps me kind of busy during off seasons. I do most of the work about the places. Terry encourages his players to get into business."

Hank and Terry have often been pictured as at swords' points, for Hank, unlike most of the Giants, is not afraid of the cheerless leader, nor, like others, is he secretly contemptuous of him. He regards him with great clarity, and even kids him a little. For instance, no Giant player dares sit within two yards of their morosely detached pilot in the dugout. "I always get a kick out of that," Hank laughed. "Sometimes I come back to the bench and all the guys are so huddled together at one end of the bench—while Bill sits alone at the other end—that there isn't any place to sit down. So I say, 'Quit crowding Terry, boys.'"

Rodriguez Rides Five Winners; They Pay Total of $393

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.—The Cuban jockey, Eugene Rodriguez, has ridden five long-shot winners at Santa Anita in the last two days.

Five $2 win tickets on his horses returned $393.20.

Yesterday he booted home Esco-Mac for a winning price of $113. Today he brought in four long ones. He had Get On for $33.40; First Choice for $142.60; Olimpo for $75 and One Shen for $29.20.

This was charity day at Santa Anita, the entire proceeds going to the American Red Rross, which benefitted by $50,000.

A WHISKEY AS DISTINCTIVE AS YOUR Signature

Hiram Walker's Signet stands alone—the one and only of its kind among fine whiskies. Try this superb whiskey—you'll find it delightfully different. It will make your "old favorite" drink a brand new adventure in downright deliciousness! For Signet is aged five long years in charred casks that have been pre-mellowed by repeated prior use. It's aged in aged wood just as fine Scotch and Canadian whiskies and rare old brandies have been pre-mellowed.

One of the most expensive whiskies made in America. This whiskey is 5 years old. 100 proof. Price, $2.40 4/5 quart

Cherry Jam, Joe Schenck Also in Money

The Chief, Favorite, Finishes Fourth in Grade A Handicap; Winner Pays $15.40

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 29.—For the second Wednesday in a row, E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson won the featured grade "A" handicap by a head here this afternoon. As in the grade "B" and "C" events, a driving finish resulted, and in two of them, the topweighted horses were victorious.

Nearest to Clyde Tolson at the end of the seven furlongs was Mrs. Payne Whitney's lightly rigged Cherry Jam, which beat Woolford Farm's Joe Schenck by a length and a half. Maxwell Howard's The Chief, as in his two other starts this winter, wound up fourth. He was favorite in the field of six.

Clyde Tolson paid his backers $15.40 for $2. His time was 1:23 3-5.

The crowd was 11,530.

Cherry Jam and the winner fought it out all the way, with the first named showing the way by a length or so into the stretch. The Chief kept close up until rounding the bend. He then gave way to Joe Schenck as the nearest in pursuit of the two leaders. Irving Anderson, scoring a double, put up a strong finish to urge the game Clyde Tolson to the front in the final 70 yards. Joe Schenck beat The Chief by a half dozen lengths for the show.

TONYPANDY, first away, set good pace, was steadied when challenged by MARY SCHULZ, responded gamely to pressure and won with some speed in reserve. SILENT WITNESS was allowed to race on own courage early, came wide into stretch and closed resolutely. MARY SCHULZ, closest to winner from start, took lead approaching stretch and weakened suddenly in closing stages. SNOW had no excuses.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,400; Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:32. TOWN BOY came to inside of MINEE-MO to take command leaving backstretch, drew clear, but had to be kept to pressure to stave off closing bid of RINGIE. The latter was well placed from start, came to outside for final drive and was wearing down winner at end. MINEE-MO was rushed to top, lost ground at far turn and came gamely after being displaced. CHERRY TRIPLE closed some ground from sluggish beginning.

FIFTH RACE—Seven furlongs (chute). Purse, $1,500; Grade B Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:03. Off 4:03½. ROYAL MAN, keen forward factor from beginning, was under mild restraint after yielding lead to EQUISTONE, responded willingly when shaken up and won going away. NO SIR, slow to begin, came out for racing room after being partially blocked and closed full of run. SICKLE T was off slowly, came to inside in stretch and closed resolutely. HEATHER BROOM was pinched back approaching stretch and hung in final drive.

CLYDE TOLSON went to contention at once, was vigorously handled and wore down CHERRY JAM in final test. CHERRY JAM forced to front in opening furlong and drew clear, but could not resist winner while under severe pressure. JOE SCHENCK was in ways within striking distance and hung in final drive. THE CHIEF was rated close up, but flattened out when placed to drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:00½. Winner, Mrs. W. E. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHOEBUS, $20.60, $11.50, $6.90; PICK OUT, $14.70, $7.50; MIGAL FAY, $4.90.

PHOEBUS, sent to front under hustling tactics, was rated ahead of MIGAL FAY and withstood long drive to barely last. PICK OUT improved position gradually, came with good energy in stretch drive and weakened right at close. MIGAL FAY held forward position from start, made bids to get to leader and was tiring at close. GREY DOLL moved up boldly and tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles (chute). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:29. Off 5:30. Winner, A. Derrico's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE TOUCH, $17.80, $8.50, $4.20; GOURMET, $5.40, $3.50; FELSUN, $2.90.

SURE TOUCH was steadied closest to pace of FELSUN, rallied gamely when placed to drive and held away under pressure to end. GOURMET was in first flight from start, came out for racing room and hung after threatening winner. FELSUN set pace under restraint, but failed to stay when shaken up. WISE WILL was never a contender.

Famed Australian Stallion Purchased

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 28.—Beau Pere, one of the famed stallions in the history of the turf and the sire of many renowned race horses, arrived today aboard the liner Mariposa from Sydney, Australia. Currently he is the leading sire of Australia and New Zealand.

Louis B. Mayer, the movie magnate, purchased Beau Pere, which means "Good Father," to stand at Deepcliffe Farm, near Cupertino, in the Santa Clara Valley south of here.

The horse is a big fellow, 17 hands high, weighs 1,400 pounds and is 12 years old. Beau Pere was foaled in England and is by Son-In-Law, out of Cinna. After racing with indifferent success he was sent to Australia. His sons and daughters have won all the principal stakes and handicaps "down under" since 1937.

Selections at Hialeah Park

Dear Al:

The Bobby Merritts (he is the jockey and she is the former Babs Ryan of stage and radio fame) have a brand new daughter, their third girl in a row. Since the arrest and conviction of a Boston man, there have been no cases of altered or counterfeit tickets, according to Charles Munn, President of the American Totalizator Co. Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, three-year-old champion in 1940 and the year's leading money winner, turned in an impressive one mile and a furlong trial yesterday. The highly regarded $50,000 Widener candidate moved smoothly in his first extended trial of 1941. The fractions for the workout were: 0:51, 1:17; 1:43; 1:57-2-5, breezing. Elmer Dale Shaffer's Heliopolis, English threat for the Widener, worked away from the starting gate in company with two stablemates. He was timed a quarter of a mile in :23-2-5. Trainer M. Harrison received a wire Tuesday afternoon that Cabelleta, a Stimulus—Note o' Love mare, had foaled a colt by Sirasia. Papa Sirasia evidently was overjoyed at the news, for the W. C. Stroube color bearer then went out and finished third in the one mile and a furlong eighth race behind Bow Low and Bar Fly. W. C. Stroube, owns an extensive breeding establishment near Corsicana, Texas. Jockeys Don Meade and Eddie Arcaro are lengthening their lead in the race for the gold watch in the veteran rider's division at Hialeah. Meade has ridden eighteen winners and Arcaro, by virtue of a triple score on Tuesday, raised his total to 16. Wendell Eads continues to head the apprentice group with 15 victories and Conn McCreary has nine.—BILL.

First race—ELECTRIC was a surprise winner in fast time last out. Appears well placed in this field and I look for another set of brackets. METHODICAL was second to Albatross and deserves attention. HIS SHADOW also was second in his recent race.

Second race—The also eligible list seems to hold the strong hand in this test. BOSTON MAN is a doubtful starter but will be right there if sent postward. DOCKET was fourth in fair company and should be a keen factor. ONE TIP is good as that last and should make a money appearance.

Third race—THE RHYMER is a first-time starter and worked six furlongs in 1:12 2-5. That move is swift enough to take a purse in this field. BAD COLD is in good shape despite the name. VESTED has some promising races.

Fourth race—ORCHIDS NEXT is tossed in this with 100 pounds and the light rigging may decide. I'm trying to run this one down. WHITE HOT has won two out of three tries and is dangerous. ENDYMION has speed and belongs in the money.

Fifth race—CAVALIER has the closing ability to take a distance affair of this sort. Should like the turf course and appears to be the best bet of the day. MERITORIOUS was bet on last out and may be better than generally rated. BOLIVAR'S last was a beaut.

Sixth race—MYTHICAL KING won at Tropical and seems to have found another promising spot in this field. Needs only the right handling. TOPEE is one of the most improved horses on the grounds. PLOWSHARE for the show end.

Seventh race—KING'S BLUE did everything asked last out and has all the earmarks of a repeater in this company. DRUDGERY had plenty of foot and is dangerous. ESPINO GOLD is a possible long-shot surprise.

Eighth race—JACK STING comes from a barn full of fit horses and should take the top money in this cheap company. PERLETTE won recently and is the one to beat. BRIGHT SONINA for the minor award.

Best bet—Cavalier.

C. U., Columbus Boxers Hit by Colds

Explorers May Lose Charlie Cox

McNamara's Boys Meet Citadel Here; Catholic U. Suffers Loss of Stanges

The District's two "C. U." boxing teams are hit and hit hard by the bad cold jinx—all of which doesn't add up to anything exactly pleasant for their Saturday night fight dates.

In the first place, Columbus University is on the verge of losing one of its two experienced fighters, Charlie Cox, and in the second place, Catholic University has lost its heavyweight, Jules Stanges. Both are suffering from severe colds.

The fighting Explorers of Columbus, who meet The Citadel Saturday night in Turner's Arena, already have been set back by one cancelation and midyear examinations and the loss of Cox would be a serious blow to Coach Jim McNamara's hopes for an undefeated season.

Cox, who fought in the 135-pound class last year, has been moved up to the 165-pound division, and if he is held out it means that McNamara will have to depend almost entirely on a rookie line-up for the fights with the Carolina Cadets. Lou Taub a featherweight, is the only other experienced man on the Explorer squad.

Graham May Replace Cox

Howard Graham, a rugged but slightly green lad, will replace Cox if the latter's sniffles do not abate in time for the Saturday night date. The Citadel has a fairly stiff puncher in the 165-pound class to offer, Lou Sammusson.

Coach Eddie LaFond's troubles at Catholic University are slightly less serious. To replace the ailing Stanges, who hasn't shown any too much ability in the ring, LaFond has a newcomer, Bernard Cody, 6-foot-3, 195-pound sophomore.

Cody, billed as a right-hand artist by the Cardinal propaganda department, will face a difficult assignment in Fred Goettel, a third classman at the New London (Conn.) Coast Guard Academy.

Goettel made his boxing debut for the Guardsmen only two weeks ago, but he made it a success by knocking out a victory over the University of Maryland's Izzy Lietes.

C. U. Drills Today

Cody and Goettel will be at a par in experience only, however. The New London fighter stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs well over 200 pounds.

LaFond will have his full squad out today for the first workout of the week. Their 6½—1½ victory over Lock Haven Teachers was not too impressive, but LaFond has been unable to get the Cardinal fighters together because of examinations.

Meet Mr. District of Columbia

whether Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters hold up. "If they do," he says, "it should be the Reds again. They're a good ball club. They can't hit, but they all can run and have great arms. That's why they let the grass on their infield get bushier than any other infield grass in baseball, because it slows up the ball and gives them a chance to beat out infield hits, and yet their arms are good enough to keep other terms from taking the same advantage. But if Derringer or Walters both fall it'll be a dog fight."

Hank's a holdout, but, of course, he'll play. He isn't one to yell defiance and threaten to stay home forever. "I think they'll come around to my way of thinking," he said, returning to the contract subject. "If I'm to make any money out of baseball I must make it this year, next year and the year after. The Giants looked for years for a good Jewish ball player, but I slipped in the back door almost unnoticed. Now they're going to pay me what I'm worth to them. The club didn't do badly financially last year. Despite those poor crowds at the end of the year we drew more than the year before. Brooklyn put us over. The newspapers said that Stoneham went to the baseball meetings with a satchel of cash. And I read newspapers."

5 More Stars Added to Table Tennis Here

Five more nationally - ranking players, four of them among the first ten, entered the Eastern Table Tennis Tournament to be played at Heurich gym Saturday and Sunday, according to an official announcement last night.

Topped by Sol Schiff, former national champion and currently the second ranking player of the land, the group includes Charley Schmidt, No. 3 on the United States ratings; Lee Lowry, the Massachusetts champion, who is ranked sixth; Bernie Grimes, ranked ninth, and Paul Capelle, jr., No. 40.

Receipt of their entries left the tournament minus only one of seven of the first ten players they hope to get, but inasmuch as that one is Defending and National Champion Lou Pagliaro, the committee isn't worried. "Paggy will show up, never fear," they said last night.

Four more New Yorkers and one from Philadelphia also sent in their entries—Mel Rose, Phil Kenner, Roy Weissman and John Somael being the men from Manhattan and Abbott Nelson the one from the city of brotherly love.

Because of the heavy influx of male entries and a disappointing lack of women participants, the spotlight definitely will be on the men's division. But with the country's foremost pair of rivals, Schiff and Pagliaro, due to be involved with their nearest challenging competitors, no lack of fireworks can be foreseen.

Tinsley's Pro Grid Career May Be Ended

Baton Rouge, La., Jan. 29 (AP).—Gaynell Tinsley, all-American end on Louisiana State University's football team in 1935-36 and later star of the professional Chicago Cardinals, said today he believed his pro career was over.

Visiting his alma mater's spring grid workouts, Tinsley let Trainer C. F. Striplin look over his knee, weak since he tore a cartilage in October. Striplin said it seemed to be getting along well and that an operation probably would be unnecessary.

Bethesda Five Meets Blair Tonight at 8

Fully aware that a victory may mean an out-of-town tournament bid later on, Bethesda-Chevy Chase High's basketball Barons tonight take on Montgomery Blair cagers at Maryland University's gymnasium at 8 p. m.

The game will be the first of two between the clubs this year and will have considerable bearing on the mythical Montgomery County title. The largest turnout at Ritchie Coliseum this season is anticipated.

Bethesda-C. C. goes into the battle on the extremely long end of the odds, but that fact worries more than pleases Coach Alan Vogt, Baron coach. Though he appears to have two times as much power at his command as Coach Cres Bride, of Blair, the possibility of over-confidence and certainty that Blair will play one of its best games of the season has Vogt talking to himself.

Carter Carries Hopes

In games to date, Bethesda has compiled one of the four best records in this vicinity. It has won 11 of its 14 games, and one of its losses was by a single point. Blair, on the other hand, has won only three games this season and lost eight.

Blair's big hope tonight will be lanky Nick Carter, the third highest schoolboy scorer in the metropolitan area. Bethesda will counter with seven or eight dependable scorers—including Bob Cremins, Bobby Keene, Duke Hashagen, Elton McClure, Dick Gaist and Dick Poerstel—but none rank as high as Carter in the point department.

Launches Series

Tonight's clash launches a series of three meetings of old rivals. Washington-Lee High, in Ballston, entertains George Washington High, of Alexandria, tomorrow night, and Saturday the forces of Gonzaga and St. John's come together at Tech with the Catholic Prep championship the big issue.

Local schoolboys engaged in three games today besides the Bethesda-Blair business. St. John's and Woodrow Wilson tangle in a 3:30 game at the latters' court, Devitt moves out to Ammendale, Md., to face Briarley Military Academy, and Washington-Lee clashes with Fredericksburg at the latters' gym.

Joe Louis to Stage Own Golf Tourney

Detroit, Jan. 29 (AP).—Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis will sponsor his own golf tournament next summer, associates announced tonight, with the idea of making the Joe Louis Open an annual golfing event.

Bob Seymour, manager of the tournament, said arrangements were being completed to hold it next August 12, 13 and 14 at the Rackham Golf Course, scene of the National Public Links tourney here last summer. The event, for Negroes, is planned as a 72-hole medal play tourney.

The tennis greats of two nations—Alice Marble, the American star, and Mary Hardwick, Great Britain's No. 1 player—will arrive today to settle down in anticipation of their professional match tomorrow night at Ritchie Coliseum of the University of Maryland.

Miss Marble, who is leading her English opponent by a commanding margin, having won 11 out of the 12 matches through Tuesday night, and Miss Marble will arrive at Union Station at 12:50 p. m. Accompanying them will be Jack Harris, of Chicago, sponsor of the coast-to-coast tour of 65 matches.

Shortly after reaching town the two feminine aces will be whisked around Washington on a round of entertainments. They will attend a luncheon given by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House this afternoon, and at 5:15 they will be the guests for tea of Lady Halifax, wife of the newly arrived British Ambassador. Radio interviews also are on tap for the feminine players, former rivals as amateurs, now cashing in on their tennis careers. Miss Marble expects to receive $50,000 for her playing.

Tomorrow will be another active day. Between 12 and 2 p. m. at the Hecht Company Sport Shop, Tilden and Eleanor Tennant, Alice Marble's discoverer-teacher, will talk tennis. At 4 p. m. Miss Marble and her teacher will hold forth at a clinic at Tech High's gym, public invite.

U. S. Steel Slumps on 'Disappointing' Report; General List Off 1 to 4 on Light Offerings

New York, Jan. 29.—The stock market took a decisive turn to the downside today, numerous issues yielding losses of 1 to around 4 points.

Starting in steels after overnight publication of United States Steel's fourth quarter profit report, the selling spread through the list. Poorly supported, the market gave way readily before moderate offerings.

At the close the Associated Press composite price of 60 stocks was down .8 to 42.8, the lowest since August.

Brokers said the decline from the early January highs was accelerated by execution of stop-loss orders as leading issues broke through low points established the last few months.

United States Steel finished down 2⅝ at 64½ and Bethlehem was off 2½ at 82½. DuPont lost 3½ at 152. Douglas Aircraft was off nearly 3 at 71⅝.

Closing 1 to 4 lower were Republic Steel, Johns Manville, Eastman, American Can, Air Reduction, American Smelting, U. S. Gypsum, Boeing, Santa Fe, Phelps Dodge, Allied Chemical Electric, U. S. Rubber and International Harvester.

U. S. Steel's report, showing about $3 a share earned for the common stock in the final period of 1940, was described in brokerage circles as somewhat "disappointing," considering preliminary estimates ranging to above $4 a share. It was noted, however, the big producer made special charges against earnings which reduced the coverage for the common.

At any rate, U. S. Steel was one of the first noticeable weak spots. Other steels fell in step, then the list generally. Corporate bonds and commodities joined the slide.

Apparently contributing to uneasiness in the market place were the death of Premier Metaxas of Greece, leader of the Greek struggle against Italian invasion, and reports the axis was gathering strength for a big blow at the British Isles. Anticipation of decisive developments in Europe by spring appeared to have been a restraint on stock speculation for some time.

Midweek business reports indicating factory output was maintained at peak levels of the war upswing while unfilled orders continued to mount in steel and other fields passed as a secondary market influence.

Transactions increased to 599,690 shares compared with 467,730 the previous session.

In the Curb list Aluminum of America ended at 144, down 3. Closing fractions to more than a point lower were American Light & Traction, Bell Aircraft, New Jersey Zinc, Republic Aviation and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Sales were 127,000 shares against 95,000 yesterday.

Cotton Futures

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Cotton futures dropped 6 to 11 points today on fears United States export markets for the staple might be cut still further by British policy in South America.

A trade report said England would purchase the unsold surplus of the 1940 Peruvian crop. Although the total of approximately 25,000 bales is small, dealers said this arrangement might be extended to Brazil and elsewhere.

Declines were scored in the face of spirited opposition by trade and mill interests. Backed up by weakness in securities and other commodities, and by increasing fears the invasion of England might be attempted in the near future, pressure proved too great to withstand.

Worth Street dealers estimated sales of popular cotton goods numbers at 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 yards, but buyers continued to resist recent price advances.

No exports Tuesday; season so far, 859,247 bales. Port receipts, 7,403; port stocks, 3,471,940.

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Sales of gray goods were estimated between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 yards up to early afternoon today. Purchases were well spread throughout the list.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Jan. 29 (AP).—Wheat prices, which have been declining slowly the last three weeks, today broke through pre-Christmas lows and sank to levels which have not been equaled here in three to four months. Losses of as much as 1⅝ cents carried May wheat to 82½, lowest since November 6, and July to 76⅞, lowest since October 5. Closing figures were ⅞ to 1⅝ lower than yesterday; May 82⅛@82¾, July 77⅛@77½. The break was attributed largely to stop-loss selling and "short" sales, partly inspired by weakness of securities losses of 5 to 6 cents since January 7 without any material revival of consuming demand on the part of millers or flour users discouraged many dealers.

Corn closed ¾ to 1⅛ lower than yesterday, May 61⅞@61¾, July 62½; oats ⅛ to ¼ down; soybeans 1¾ to 2¼ lower; rye ⅞ to 1 off, and lard 5 to 8 lower.

Accumulated small bookings increased volume of flour business the last week, millers reported, but trade continued on a hand-to-mouth basis in most cases, except for a 100,000-barrel sale in the Southwest to an Eastern chain baker.

MURPHY

Mr. Murphy came to Washington from Kentucky in 1920 as a member of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Louisville Times bureau. From 1924 to 1929 he was on the Washington staff of the Baltimore Sun, from which he resigned in 1929 to join the Ayer agency in Philadelphia. Traders Group to Meet

The executive council of the National Security Traders Association will meet in Chicago on February 4, President Thomas A. Akin announced here yesterday. Representatives of 2,200 members will discuss current problems of the securities business.

Board Room Chatter

G. B. Chipman, manager of the Washington office of Laidlaw & Co., tells this story:

"During the Presidential inauguration a gentleman who looked as if he came from Arkansas, entered our office and looked around in a quizzical manner. Finally he asked, pointing to the chairs in our boardroom; 'Are those Stock Exchange Seats which I read about in the papers and which cost $30,000?'"

London Stocks

London, Jan. 29 (AP).—The securities market headed downward again today after initial firmness.

Brokers said that while there was no substantial selling, prices were marked down as a precautionary measure because buyers held off pending further news from the war and economic fronts.

Losses in domestic rails ranged to 1¼ points. Traders were inclined to take a little less optimistic view of revenue and dividend prospects. Oils held up well, however, in view of satisfactory news from Libya.

Big Board in Desperate Fight To Keep Alive, Martin Asserts

By the Associated Press

William McC. Martin, jr., asserted at a Securities Commission hearing yesterday that "to put it bluntly, the New York Stock Exchange is struggling desperately to keep in business."

Martin, who became president of the exchange in 1938 at the age of 31, was the first witness called by the exchange in a proceeding initiated by the SEC to determine whether it should order the exchange to rescind its rule against so-called multiple trading. This rule prohibits a member of the New York exchange from dealing as a principal on a regional exchange in securities which are listed in New York.

Disclosing that one of his hobbies since he became a member of the exchange in 1931 has been a historical study of New York financial development, Martin summarized the history of the exchange since it was organized in 1792.

Getting up to recent years, he disclosed that the ratio of annual turnover to the number of listed stocks was the lowest in history last year. The exchange had a loss of about $981,000 last year, he testified, and the last time it made a profit was in 1936. The gain that year was $172,000.

After he had completed his recital of events leading up to the appointment of a committee to examine the multiple trading problem, Martin was excused without cross examination by SEC counsel.

He was followed by Robert L. Stott, a specialist on the New York exchange who was chairman of the committee which made the report leading to the exchange rule.

Stott said that his committee had interviewed 32 persons, including the presidents of stock exchanges at Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Pittsburgh and Baltimore. He said that the study led his committee to the conclusion that he practice of New York members dealing for themselves on regional exchanges was unfair and that the committee then asked the Board of Governors for a "public dealing rule."

Cotton, Wheat Lead Staples In Sharp Drop

By the Associated Press

Foodstuffs and industrial raw materials swept lower over a broad front in futures markets yesterday as traders speculated over the possibility the long-heralded attempt at invasion of England might occur in the near future.

Declines ranging to 1-8 cent a pound were posted at New York for copper, hides, zinc, cottonseed oil and wool tops.

Cotton dropped 30 to 55 cents a bale as rumors circulated Great Britain had contracted to buy the unsold part of Peru's cotton crop and might extend that policy to other Latin-American nations, thus harming still further the already strangled United States export market.

Wheat at Chicago dropped to the lowest in three to four months. Overhanging the pit were the huge North American and domestic exportable surpluses and the new crop outlook. Wheat lost ⅞ to 1⅝ cents a bushel and corn, ¾ to 1⅛.

Other staples lower at New York included coffee, domestic sugar and cocoa. World sugar and silk were mixed while rubber improved.

Power Output Drops in Week

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Electric power production declined in the week ended January 25 after three straight advances, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Latest output of 2,829,959,000 Kilowatt hours was .5 of 1 per cent less than 2,843,962,000 in the preceding week but 10.3 per cent ahead of 2,565,958,000 in the comparable 1940 week.

Westinghouse Sales in Year Set New Top

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. today announced orders booked in 1940 totaled $400,477,724, largest in the company's history and nearly double $214,239,044 in 1939. December orders amounted to $49,197,370.

Sales billed in December increased to $22,276,781 from $18,037,096 a year earlier. For the year billings stepped up to $239,431,447 from $176,858,811 in 1939.

Unfilled orders on December 31 totaled $223,685,737, compared with $70,821,960 at the end of 1939.

Directors voted dividends of $1 each on the common and 7 per cent participating preferred stock, both payable March 5 to holders of record February 14. Similar amounts were paid in August, November and December.

Steel Delivery Problems Grow

New York, Jan. 29 (AP).—Delivery problems of the steel companies have become more serious as a result of "an increasingly large volume of steel for defense purposes, superimposed on already crowded order books," said Iron Age today in its weekly survey.

"In spite of the tighter situation that is developing," asserted the trade journal, "there is no pressure either from the industry, its customers or the Government for the use of mandatory priorities . . . it seems to be the intention of Government authorities to permit each industry to work out its own remedies without invoking priorities."

Buy Cotton in U. S., Council Urges British

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 29 (AP).—The National Cotton Council today asked Great Britain to make all its foreign cotton purchases in the United States.

Resolutions adopted at the closing session of its convention pointed out that Great Britain now is negotiating with Brazil and Peru for cotton, and asserted council belief all should be bought here since this nation is helping England supply its armies.

U. S. Exports, Imports Soar During Year

By the Associated Press

Shipments of war materials to the British Empire boosted United States merchandise exports in 1940 to $4,021,564,000—the highest since 1929.

Due partly to purchases of strategic materials such as rubber, imports also increased to $2,623,445,000, producing an excess of exports amounting to $1,398,119,000, the largest excess since 1921.

The export figure was 27 per cent higher than in 1939 and the import figure was 13 per cent higher. In 1939, exports totaled $3,177,176,000, imports $2,318,081,000, and the export excess was $859,095,000.

"Since shipments of materials and instruments of defense to the United Kingdom and other British Empire countries showed substantial gains," the Commerce Department said in announcing the figures, "the effect on the foreign trade total of the practical elimination of German-controlled Europe as a market was less marked than might have been expected.

"These gains in the value of shipments to the British Empire, together with increased trade with Latin America, largely accounted for the higher total of foreign trade in 1940."

The gains, however, were concentrated in manufacturing industries, and "agricultural exports during the final months of 1940 were at the lowest level since 1869."

Six vital defense commodities—steel, other metals, aircraft, metal working machinery, firearms and certain chemicals—trebled their export value during the first 16 months of the war. On an annual basis, shipments of these commodities advanced from $706,000,000 in 1939 to $1,492,000,000 in 1940. Shipment of agricultural products, once the mainstay of the export business, amounted last year only to $517,000,000.

Besides the most vital defense products, other types of manufactured and semi-manufactured goods gained about 11 per cent although some items, including passenger automobiles, declined.

The import gain was attributed by the department "to a larger volume of purchases of six leading strategic commodities—crude rubber, raw silk, nickel, tin, antimony and ferro-alloying metals."

Those of you who aren't able to attend one of the President's Birthday Balls in person will be able to hear the highlights, climaxed by the talk of the President himself, simply by tuning in WJSV today and tonight.

The President is expected to extend his greetings to the Nation at 11:24 p. m., but WJSV will be on the air from 11:15 to 12:15 to bring you a comprehensive picture of the celebrations being held in his honor throughout the Nation.

That will include the festivities at Hotel Astor in New York, with talks by G. W. Johnstone, radio director of the President's Birthday Ball Committee, and by Keith Morgan, the national chairman, and the music of Leo Dryer's orchestra. In addition to the President's address from Washington, there'll be one by Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, for whose benefit the balls are being held, and from the Mayflower Hotel you'll hear Benny Goodman playing the President's favorite musical selections. From Chicago's celebration at the Sherman Hotel, you'll be piped into the music of Gene Krupa's orchestra, and from New Orleans, Col. D. Walker Wear will talk and Jan Garber's orchestra will hold forth.

At 3:45 p. m. WJSV will bring into your homes the reception tendered celebrities by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and from 6 to 6:15 you'll hear festivities from Willard Hotel.

Westminster Choir Wins Acclaim Here

John Finley Williamson conducts the Westminster Choir in Constitution Hall on Wednesday night. Program of unaccompanied choral music by Bach, Lotti, Liszt, Brahms, Willoughby, Wilhourki-Cain, Borchers, Earl Robinson, Stokowski, Avery Robinson and Farwell.

Appearing here in the course of a midwinter tour, the Westminster Choice of Princeton sang last evening in Constitution Hall for a large and demonstrative audience which included many members of local churcn choirs. Listeners of that category, attentive to technical details of attack, dynamics and phrasing, were particularly appreciative of the excellent training the 40 voices have received from John Finley Williamson. Other auditors, not so professionally interested, enjoyed a varied program that included Earl Robinson's popular "Ballad for Americans."

BROWN

There have been seasons when the Westminster Choir had a better quality of massed tone than it exhibits this year. Changes in personnel inevitably affect the blending of timbres, and it was the tenor section on this occasion that fell short of complete satisfaction. The contraltos were not equal to the sopranos in assurance or in suavity of tone. But there was no question about the skill of the group in part-singing.

The program opened with Bach's "The Spirit Also Helpeth Us" in which the contrapuntal writing was clearly outlined. Antonio Lotti's "Crucifixus" was followed by a fine reading of the "Benedictus" from Liszt's rarely-heard "Missa Choralis." Another Bach composition, "Come, Blessed Rest," preceded Brahms' lively motet, "O Savior, Throw the Heavens Wide."

A group of carols included Ernest Willoughby's "Joseph Came Seeking a Resting Place," Peter Wilhouski's "Carol of the Bells," Noble Cain's "Carillon" and Orville Borchers' "Joy."

Primary in the closing group was Leopold Stokowski's "Negro Rhapsody," written for the choir by the eminent orchestral conductor with the deftness one would have expected of him. Using the melodies of "Deep River" and "Sometime I Feel Like a Motherless Child," he has devised some striking effects in tone color. After this interesting number came Avery Robinson's "Water Boy" and Arthur Farwell's arrangement of a Navajo melody.

Contract Bridge

Seasoned bridge players have learned by bitter experience to beware of distributional storms. The cross-ruff, most deadly of defensive measures, is likely to reduce the rank of aces and kings to that of the common herd of numbered cards and more than one hand has brought forth a distributional cyclone, which brought ruin to the player most wealthy in honors.

♣ A Q 10

Against this tremendous hand, A Mitchell Barnes and William J. Huske, members of the opposing team, bid six spades; and what is more, made it, as one of them was void of diamonds and the other held no hearts, and both king and jack of clubs were over Mr. Reith's club holding.

Rail Executives Told to Expect Biggest Boom

A "poor man's prosperity," involving the biggest merchandise boom in history, and affecting most the rank and file workers, will result from the national defense program, more than 400 Washington railroad executives were told last night by Harry B. Brown, of the Philco Co.

Speaking at the banquet of the Washington Passenger Association, in the Mayflower Hotel, Brown called upon the railroad men to recognize subtle changes in public trends and buying habits to reap the maximum benefit from the expected prosperity.

New officers, installed at the meeting, included: President, Hammong F. Brown, of Southern Pacific Lines; vice presidents, J. Elmer Lundquist, Union Pacific System, and J. H. Beates, Pennsylvania Railroad; secretary-treasurer, H. J. Shrieves, Pennsylvania Railroad, and entertainment chairman, C. B. Kincaid, Chesapeake & Ohio Lines.

'Course, I don't know all the dope, but the Counsellors at Camp say they're built on a special 'last' and are mighty good for a fellow's feet, and Mom says them non-soak soles are the longest wearing soles she knows of."
